TAFT IS HIT HARD BY CLARK

QUINCY, Ill., Aug. 29.—Champ Clark, leader of the National House of Representatives, before leaving here early today, replied emphatically to President Taft's speech delivered at Hamilton, Mass., last Saturday.

In a signed interview the Speaker accused the President of not stating facts. He said he did not reply for the insurgent Republicans, who "no doubt will take up the cudgels in their own behalf."

He declared among other things that if the tariff board is to be used as a pretext for delaying tariff revision downward, the Democrats will cut off its supplies.

"President Taft's speech at Hamilton, Mass., last Saturday," said Speaker Clark, "can only be described as remarkable when history of the recent past is taken into consideration. He essayed the rather large stunt of running mates on both the Democrats and the insurgent Republicans in Congress, singling out Mr. Chairman Underwood and myself particularly as democratic targets.

"I accept his onslaught as a badge of honor.

Sees Defeat Ahead.

"The President and I are personal friends. He has done me many kindnesses, and I have tried to repay them as far as opportunity has served. He is, as a rule, a most amiable man, but at the time he seems to have been in a bad temper because he sees defeat staring him in the face. I would say nothing unkind about him, but I cannot, and will not, rank his personal experiences and his bald statements of historical facts to go unchallenged.

"My observation and experience prove my mind that Senator La Follette and insurgents are aids to take care of Democrats. So I leave them out of this review. They will no doubt take up the cudgels in their own behalf.

"The President's criticism of Mr. Underwood and myself, which is essentially a criticism of all Democrats in the House and Senate, because all Democrats stood together, is absolutely unwilled for and is as ungrateful a performance as I can remember for, if it had not been for the action of the Democrats in the House in both the sixty-first and sixty-second Congresses in lining up almost unanimously in favor of reciprocity with Canada, he would have to the most thoroughly discredited and vilified President since the days of Andrew Jackson.

"With all the indulgence and patronage his great office, he could not muster a majority of Republicans for reciprocity in either the sixty-first or sixty-second Congresses. After we pulled him out of the hole in the sixty-first Congress I wrote a letter of thanks to Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts and the Republicans, and a word of thanks to the Democrats.

"When we repeated the performance of long him out of the hole in the sixty-second Congress, he did divide the thanks between Democrats and Republicans. That is us after I and other Democrats had exposed our opinions with considerable ree and bluntness about his letter of anks to Mr. McCall.

Kept Pledge to People.

"The President says that we did not ty politics about reciprocity, for that I did play politics about the tariff. The ly politics we played was to keep faith h the people, and to religiously redeem the promises we made in order to n the election of 1910, which is the st and noblest sort of politics. If any litics was played for reciprocity, the resident himself played it—personally, that time.

"He seems to think that we ought to ve adjourned as soon as reciprocity was posed of—that is, he seems to think at Congress is composed of a lot of hool boys to be ordered about by his head teacher, but he was forewarned th by Mr. Underwood and myself, that he called an extraordinary session, we ould pass tariff bills and such other bills the Democrats deemed advisable. He ill not deny that statement.

"If we had done less than we did do we would not have been worthy of so ast a position of public confidence as

BROKERS' FIRM IS BANKRUPT

Benjamin H. Cram and Alfred A. Mulliken, doing business as Cram, Mulliken & Co., stock brokers, filed voluntary partnership petitions in bankruptcy this afternoon with the clerk of the United States District Court. The total liabilities are $261,468. The assets, as a firm, are $12,900.

Of the $261,468, the liabilities are individual.

The firm as a partnership owes $142,965. Cram owes $32,922 and Mulliken owes, individually, of this amount, $17,380. Neither of the individuals has any assets. One of the heaviest creditors of the firm is the Colonial Savings Bank, $20,000, which is secured by $20,000 worth of collateral.

STONEMAN CASE BEFORE COUNCIL

David Stoneman, whose confirmation as associate justice of Dorchester District Court is opposed in charges preferred by former Representative David Mancevitz of Ward 8, appeared before the Governor's Council to-day and denied the Mancevitz accusations.

James H. Vahey, former Democratic candidate for Governor, also appeared before the council at the hearing, which was secret. Afterwards Mr. Vahey said to a reporter:

"I appeared voluntarily to testify on behalf of Stoneman. I have known Mr. Stoneman for the last thirty years. His reputation at the bar and in private life is excellent."

Stoneman was accompanied by his counsel, Frank M. May, and Mancevitz by his lawyer, Solomon Lowenberg. It was announced that the hearing would be closed to-day and that a vote would be had at the regular session of the Governor's Council to-morrow.

Mancevitz preferred five charges against Stoneman. The first was that he was a "loan shark," lending money at extortionate rates of interest; that he was alleged that Stoneman gave a prominent Democratic politician a check for $2,500 in return for exerting his influence with Governor Foss in behalf of Stoneman; third, concerned the administration of an estate, and the fourth and fifth charges were kept secret by the council. To-day's was the chief hearing.

TWO CAR CRASHES AND THREE FALLS

Three accidents were reported to the police early to-day. John E. Carrigan, 47 years old of No. 1011 Harrison avenue, was knocked down by a car in front of No. 2023 Washington street, and sustained a fractured left hip and injuries to the head. He was taken to the City Hospital.

Homer Johnson, 31, of No. 171 Walnut street, Somerville, a teamster, had his right arm broken when he was hurled from his seat to the ground after a car struck his wagon in Jackson street, Charlestown. He was taken to the Relief Hospital.

Patrick Welsh, 25, of No. 187 Silver street, South Boston, while at work on the elevated structure on Washington, near Oneida street, Roxbury, fell to the ground, and sustained a fractured left wrist. He went to the City Hospital.

RAIL STRIKEBREAKERS ARE RUSHED WEST

DENVER, Col., Aug. 29.—While J. A. Franklin, national president of the Railway Makers' Union, and M. T. Ryan, national president of the Carmen, are speeding to San Francisco in the hope of averting threatened trouble on the Harriman lines, strikebreakers are being rushed into San Francisco in anticipation of a general walkout.

BOSTON MILK RATE RAISE CALLED OFF

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—An advance of three cents a can on milk shipped over the Delaware & Hudson railroad from points in New York State to Boston, which was to have become effective September 1, was suspended to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission until December 29.

BISHOP WOULDN'T MARRY COL. ASTOR FOR $2,000,000 FEE

READING, Aug. 29.—Bishop Henry M. Lenhof, pastor of the Fellowship of God Church, attacked the proposed Astor-Force marriage.

"The minister that performs that ceremony should forfeit his pulpit," said he. "Not for $2,000,000 or all the monies in New York could I marry that couple. Any person who would entertain favor to the altar is riches. It is awful. The work of the clergy should be to arrest such marriages and thereby benefit humanity more than they can by merely propounding the contents of the Bible."

BEATTIE READY TO TAKE STAND

CHESTERFIELD COUNTY COURT HOUSE, Va., Aug. 29.—Paul Beattie was again called to the stand for cross-examination when court was called to order to-day in the trial of his cousin, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., for the murder of his wife.

Paul Beattie showed no perturbation when he took the stand, in striking contrast to the nervousness that marked him while a witness before the coroner's jury.

"Did you tell your wife about buying the gun for Henry?" Paul was asked.

"No, sir."

Asked Advice of His Wife.

"Did you tell your wife about it?"

"No, sir. I asked my wife what to do on Thursday night," said the witness.

"Captain McMahon came to your home and asked you if you had bought a gun at the pawnshop, didn't he?"

"Yes, sir. But my father-in-law had told him that I bought the gun."

The witness said that immediately following the murder his mind was in pretty bad shape.

"Thinking I had bought a gun for my own cousin to do this thing got me all upset," he said.

Henry Beattie followed every line of his cousin's testimony with tense interest. His face wore a worried look, and he frequently prompted counsel. Paul Smith in his cross-examination.

"I told Captain McMahon all about buying the gun," Paul said.

Tries to Tangle Witness.

"Did you tell him anything he could have learned from the pawnbroker?"

"I reckon not."

"When Henry asked you to buy the gun did you ask him what he wanted with it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ask him the Saturday night following?"

"No, sir."

"Did you and Henry leave Henry Patterson's store at 10 o'clock on that Saturday night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are you sure?" Will you make a statement so positive as to swear if this is not true, nothing you have said is true?"

"I am sure. I looked at my watch as they locked up the store."

Smith made desperate endeavor to tangle up the witness.

At the coroner's inquest Paul had great difficulty in locating the pawnbroker of whom he bought the gun. To-day he admitted that he had worked in a butcher shop three doors away from there, and it became badly involved when Smith asked him why he had not remembered buying the gun at that place.

Henry Beattie rested his arm on Smith's shoulder and followed every word that the latter asked, with eager interest.

The witness said that until Henry called him on the phone and asked him to buy the gun, he never before had called him up or visited him.

Confesses His Illiteracy.

Minutes of the coroner's jury, in which Paul had testified to his inability to tell when he had bought the gun, were read at this point.

Attorney Smith tried to twist the witness' inability to tell buying the gun to put him in a damaging position. He got Paul to admit on the face of the facts it did not look right, apparently unwarranted in view of the fact, against having any suspicion fixed upon him.

Mr. Smith asked Paul if it was not solicitude for himself instead of for Henry that made him tell about the gun and confession. Paul showed his sincerity as a witness when he replied that he did not understand the meaning of the word solicitude.

"I had only a little education," he said, "and quit school in the fourth grade. I did not have any high school education, sir."

Mr. Smith swerved away from this point. The witness said that when Henry asked

ATWOOD'S STORY OF AIR MEET

By HARRY N. ATWOOD.

Noted world's record-breaking aviator, who is reporting the aviation meet for the American daily.

To-day, under favorable weather conditions, the race to Boston Light will be a very interesting feature on the program of the aviation meet now being held at the Harvard Aviation Field at Squantum.

This flight was scheduled to take place yesterday afternoon. It was a bad day for flying. The wind was very gusty. It was thought by some of the aviators that it would mean serious disaster should the flight be attempted.

A vote was taken amongst the flyers, and the result was that the majority agreed that they should not attempt the Boston Light flight owing to the unfavorable atmospheric conditions.

Howard Gill, a Burgess-Wright aviator, and Lincoln Beachey and Eugene Ely, both Curtiss flyers, united to fly. But, despite this fact, the race was postponed. If I was entered in that event I would want to fly, but, of course, majority rules.

Pleased by Home Greeting.

Yesterday afternoon I made a flight from the Montclair golf links to the aviation field. The wind was very bad. When I landed on the field I was given a reception which surpassed any I have ever experienced.

I was presented with two trophies, one from Clifford B. Harmon, the well-known automobile racer, the other from the Aviation Club of Boston. That reception was very pleasing to me because it was a "home town" greeting—and heartfelt.

Beachey gave a wonderful exhibition of flying. Ascending to an altitude of more than 2,000 feet, the game little aviator volplaned nearly all the way. He then made one of the most hair-raising descents I have seen.

Eugene Ely furnished an excellent exhibition.

Gill and Coffyn, two Burgess-Wright flyers, took the first and second prize money for accuracy in landing yesterday.

Safe and Sane Flying Best.

I did not do any flying except what I had to in order to reach the field. There is absolutely no sense in flying for pure fun in ugly air currents. The day of reckless flying is past. The aviators are all becoming frightened. They are just beginning to realize that the real practical value of the contrivances they are using machine can be better demonstrated by safe and sane flying than by aerial curley-cues.

I have not as yet decided just how I will fly to-day. I may take a spin down to Boston Light. At any rate, whatever I do I will be on hand to-morrow.—HARRY N. ATWOOD.

This will be followed by stories to be written by Atwood.

I am very glad that the contest committee has seen fit to change the weight-dropping event to bomb-dropping. Weight-dropping is a useless feat, and a dangerous one. Ely, the latter must load his machine with bags of sand, unwind, after reaching a certain altitude, drop the sand, flying over grandstands not allowed.

Weight Dropping Hazardous.

This naturally creates a very unsteady motion to the aeroplane as soon as the sand is dropped. American aviators are unaccustomed to the event, and it is a good plan to eliminate it from meets here. There is hardly any practical result from acquiring the knack of dropping sand or other weight.

It was unfortunate that Beatty should have met with an accident, even though it was slight. Beatty is a skillful flyer, and I am confident that it was no fault of his that the accident happened. The ground was slippery with mud and furnished a very unfavorable landing place.

In the accuracy in landing contest it was demonstrated that the Burgess-Wright machine responds quickly to the control. In one of these machines you can glide to your designated spot and land gently just about wherever you wish.

1,000 SIGNATURES FILED FOR HISGEN

Papers which will put him on the ballot as an independent candidate for governor were filed in behalf of Thomas L. Hisgen of West Springfield at the office of the Secretary of State to-day. There were more than 1,000 signatures, and as all had been certified, Mr. Hisgen is sure of a place on the ballot.

CRUELTY TALE FROM ASYLUM

The "bug pack" wrapping persons in cerecloths soaked with boiling water is one of the means used to restrain patients at Bloomingdale, the Worcester Hospital for the Insane, according to Harry Hanlin, who is accused of brutally beating Michael Leydon of Somerville, one of the patients of the asylum.

Hanlin described this treatment—as he calls it—in horrifying language to-day. Here is his own story of it:

"The only way they restrain the worst patients is to put them in the bug pack. Wring a sheet as wet as you can get it out. Then put the patient on the sheet. Then wrap the sheet around him so that he can't move his arms or legs. Then wrap him up in a couple of blankets. Then wrap him up in a rubber blanket so that he can't get any air. They have plenty of attendants for this purpose. The place is black with them.

"Then take sheets, soak them in hot water and wrap them around the patients. They put them on so tight that you can't get your hands in cold water continually.

"When a patient is wrapped in the bug pack they take a couple of wrapping sheets, soak them in cold water and wrap them around the patient from one to three times, according to the strength of the patient. The idea is to get the patient so he can't make any movement. It takes a strong man out for a long time to overcome the strength of the cerecloth.

"Hanlin, who is under indictment, declared that he was present when the beating, to which he referred in the statement, he described as brutal, and admitted that the attendant struck the patient often with his fist, but declared that he had to fight for his own life when the patient turned on him.

"I've had all I want," he said. "I'm not going to take all this rap. I'm not going to fight for his life any more. I'm going to fight for mine. The patients can be restrained without any effort, it was demonstrated to me, by the use of the cerecloth. They have no chance to get out of it. I understand that it is the most humane way of restraining violent patients. As I understand it, the cerecloth is soaked in boiling water, and then wrung out. It is then wrapped around the patient, and he is left there to cool off. The cerecloth shrinks and makes the patient helpless. It is a humane way of restraining violent patients. I understand that some of the doctors prefer it.

"It was just as I was going on duty and Attendant Lawless raved on his bed. I was ordered to put him in the bug pack. He was struggling and fighting me. It was a desperate case, and a hard one to handle. I

PISTOL AND DOG IN LAND DISPUTE

How Mrs. Amie Sullivan of No. 75 Preble street, South Boston, with a hatchet and a pistol compelled two painters to stop working on a neighbor's house, because their helper struggled on lack of space on her land, was told to Associate Justice Dean in the South Boston District Court to-day. She appeared as a witness against John J. Bee, who owns the house at No. 76 Preble street, and John Willetin, one of the painters employed by Bee, whom she had arrested for trespassing on her property. The court found both men not guilty and discharged them.

The case had previously been tried before Judge Fallon, when Mrs. Sullivan was straightened bad words on the charge of threatening the lives of the painters with a revolver. Judge Fallon found Mrs. Sullivan not guilty and commended her for protecting her property. Mrs. Sullivan then had Bee and Willetin arrested.

Mrs. Sullivan was represented in court by Attorney Dudley V. Mclsaac, who argued that the painters had no right to trespass on her property. He claimed that the land line of her house reached to the sky.

Bee owns the houses at Nos. 76 and 78 Preble street. Mrs. Sullivan's house is sandwiched in between. There is a space of twenty-two inches between her house and the house at No. 76. On July 31 Bee employed Willetin and another man to paint his houses. They placed a ladder against the wall of the house numbered 76. Mrs. Sullivan objected. Captain Worcott sent two officers to preserve the peace. While the officers were on the outside Mrs. Sullivan ordered Willetin and his companion down from the ladder, emphasizing her demand with a threat to shoot the latter. Bee and Willetin left the premises and sent for their lawyer. Mr. Mclsaac followed.

Bee had not just where he fitted on the land dispute. Bee had a surveyor take the measurements of the land. It was found that Bee actually owned fourteen and one-half feet of the land claimed by Mrs. Sullivan. After that Bee removed his ladder to the other side of the house. The additional inch, giving her not eight inches of the land. It was then that she got the warrant out for the arrest of Bee and Willetin on the charge of trespass.

Judge Dean said that the contentions of Mrs. Sullivan were far fetched.

RAIN PUTS A HALT ON AVIATORS

AVIATION FIELD, Squantum, Aug. 29.—Because of the rain it was announced early this afternoon that the aviation events scheduled for to-day would be postponed until Tuesday of next week.

Earlier in the day sight of the best birdmen of the country had prepared to fly to Boston Light, rain or shine. The events for the remainder of the week will be carried out according to schedule and the race to Boston Light will also take place to-morrow if weather conditions permit.

A Real High Flyer.

During the morning the fact became known that one of the pleasant and most prominent of Boston's young men had been appointed a lieutenant in the aviation corps of the United States army. Many members of the Boston Harvard corps meet under the William name of George H. Maynard Mackay is to notify Norman H. Prince, a well-known Boston sportsman, of the appointment. Prince is a member of the Harvard and sportsmen's clubs of Boston and Newport.

Henry Woodward, acting secretary of the Aero Club of America, announced that Mr. Prince would be granted a pilot's license in the Aero Club of America, following a flight to-day by the young man in which he demonstrated that he was capable as an aviation expert to be a wonderful satisfaction of an examining board appointed for the purpose.

Young Prince comes from one of the most prominent families in Boston. He is a Harvard graduate. His father, Frederick H. Prince, is senior member of the banking firm of that name. His uncle is his grandfather, Frederick O. Prince, was a well-known banker.

Early to-day, directly after a lull in the aeroplane flights, Prince started with his Burgess-Wright biplane for a trial spin. He made several flights and runs over Mr. Wiswood, the official representative of the Aero Club of America, and then made an attempt to win a pilot's license.

He handled the machine in an expert manner, flying about 500 feet in height and for half an hour or more. His flights in the air were started to land with a nearly shower attack him, and he descended in a downpour of rain. He was drenched to the skin.

Makes a Second Flight.

After the second Prince went up again and was in the air until 9 o'clock. He made a circuit of the field and continued making figure eights. In the strong breeze which was blowing the machine behaved perfectly.

Since the early summer Prince has been interested in aviation. He purchased a Burgess-Wright machine and made several flights of Frank Coffyn a Wright aviator. He made considerable progress and soon took to fly. He has made a number of successful flights in Squantum.

Prince made an unsuccessful attempt to obtain his pilot's license on Saturday last, the meeting. The weather conditions were bad, and he was not allowed to go up.

It is believed that Prince, unquestioned under the name of Maynard because his name would be barred from flying at aviation. Now that Prince has obtained his pilot's license he is eligible to compete in the aviation meet.

It was announced to-night that Grahame-White has the fastest machine on the field.

TORPEDO BOATS ASHORE IN GALE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Six torpedo boats are ashore at Charleston, S. C. They were driven on the beach by the Atlantic Sunday night, according to dispatches received at the Navy Department today.

An emergency fund of $20,000 was made by the commandant of the Charleston navy yard to meet immediate needs of the situation. The Navy Department was informed that the wind, which gained a hurricane velocity of over ninety miles an hour, had done enormous damage to government property both afloat and ashore.

The vessels before the Charleston naval station were greatly damaged, many of the buildings are down, and practically every vessel either at anchor or moored at the navy was damaged.

There are a large number of torpedo boats at Charleston and at all times they stay a few months ago Congress authorized the Navy Department to make the Charleston navy yard a torpedo assembling station for the South Atlantic coast.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 29.—With detailed reports of havoc wrought in the great hurricane which raged off the South Carolina and Georgia coasts for more than twenty-four hours coming in slowly, the death list may go to twenty-two or higher than that. When located sections are heard from it is feared that the fatalities will run into scores.

The property loss will reach $2,500,000.

Although only seven are known to be dead, fifteen are reported missing today. So great was the devastation wrought in the low lying quarter of this city, which is inhabited chiefly by negroes, that complete records could not be made and the work has been halted until the debris can be cleared away.

CLARK CHARGES TAFT MISSTATED FACTS IN SPEECH AT HAMILTON

we now enjoy. We made the best record of consecutive statesmanship made by any congress in the history of the country, and that fact is what retired the President to power.

Went Over to Standpatters.

"He had said he rates of the wool schedule in the Payne-Aldrich tariff did not make high and ought to be reduced. We reduced them. In the teeth of his Without speech, and his other declarations he vetoed the bill because he said it was not enough of a reduction. He seized our wool bill, which largely reduced the rates, and would have greatly relieved the people by giving them cheaper clothing and blankets. He vetoed it, thereby going over, boots and breeches, to the standpatters.

"We cheerfully meet him on that issue. We stand for the best interests of the masses, he stands for a handful of protected tariff barons and by his veto enables them to continue to levy exorbitant tribute upon the consumers of the land. He appeals to you that the people of this his hand which is the hand that smote them.

"The President endeavors to convey the impression that Mr. Underwood and I advocated his tariff commission. We did no such thing. What Underwood and I did advocate and what for months we have urged tariff experts to be governed by and made responsible to the House in general and to the Committee on Ways and Means in particular, because the House is charged by the constitution with the duty of originating revenue bills.

"We were never in favor of a tariff board or commission under the control of the President alone and responsible to him only. The Congressional Record will fully and clearly prove my contention here stated.

Tariff Board Non-Experts.

"The President's tariff board is composed of able and well-informed men, in a general way. I know that my friend, Hon. William Howard, is. I served in Congress with him many years, and rate his capacity high, but he is not a tariff expert. So far as I have been able to learn, the others are not experts.

"On the other hand, several members of the House, both Republicans and Democrats, including Mr. Underwood and myself, have spent half a lifetime handling and detecting the tariff. Many of us participated in debate on the Dingley bill; many of us participated later in the hearings and debates on the Payne-Aldrich-Smoot bill, which the President has declared is the best tariff bill ever passed, and which I confidently assert he should not veto.

"The services of some House and Senate members even goes back to the McKinley bill, the Wilson bill, the Wilson bill and the Morrison bills. Then why should we wait for the verdict of the President's board of tariff non-experts?

"It will be noted that while the President's ouncelpone would not permit him to sign a bill resting soon one schedule, the wool schedule, the rates of which he declared to be too high and in need of reduction, without recommendation from his board of non-experts, he promptly signed the outrageous Payne-Aldrich-Smoot tariff bill without the counsel, advice or petition of any tariff board whatsoever.

"That bill was enacted into law by a House with a Republican majority we lacked only five votes of killing it by recommitting it. That day twenty-five patriotic Republicans voted with us, among them Hon. J. R. Mann, the present Republican minority leader. I was privileged as Democratic minority leader to lead in that great day of righteous fight which still is a consolation to me as long as life lasts.

Brief Life for the Board.

"It might as well be understood now as later that if the tariff board is to be kept as a permanent, standing tariff revising downward, as the President is now using it, its days will be few, for we will not off its support. This board has already cost $500,000 or $400,000, and has not given to Congress any information to aid in revising the tariff.

"Mr. Underwood and I did say that it would gladly receive information on the tariff from anybody possessing it, but we never did say that we would rely on it, we will, together with other members, well informed on the subject, meet with only all the President's board or any other board get ready to make recommendations.

"The President himself is a man of large general information as well as a man of great ability, but certainly he is not enough of a tariff expert to justify him in vetoing a tariff bill which the House by majorities of more than two to one. It is not a flippant or unfriendly statement to say that he possessed only the slenderest information on the tariff. Governor Dingley denominated it, which he possessed by every citizen well informed in a general way.

"The President implied that he refused to sign the wool bill because it was introduced and rushed through without due consideration.

"Let's see. The caucus of Democratic members elected to the sixty-second Congress appointed a committee of seven Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means, making Mr. Underwood chairman. They personally and with their subjects or issues gave to the public notice that for the wool schedule out of four months, whereas the hearing on the Payne bill, with fourteen schedules began November 11, and the bill was reported to the House March 18, a period of a little over four months devoted to fourteen schedules.

Was Open to Debate.

"Any person in arithmetic knows that six we devoted three months to one schedule, and the framers of the Payne bill devoted on the average only two-seventhes of one month to each schedule, we devoted 101 times as much time to a schedule as did Brother Payne and his Republican committee on Ways and Means. Moreover, and notwithstanding, the President signed the Payne-Aldrich-Smoot bill and vetoed ours.

"In this connection it should not be forgotten that when Mr. Underwood reported the wool bill, every line, paragraph and section was open to debate and amendment, and that the debate continued until the members discussed it all that they wanted to, then we adjourned together hastily, without due consideration. It was one of the most deliberate and carefully considered tariff bills ever presented to any President for his signature.

"In view of the foregoing facts, it surely must be plain to the President, in his zeal to drive the broken lines of the standpatters, forgot that silence was golden, and in acquiescence in the iniquitous Payne-Aldrich-Smoot bill gotten somewhat out of line.

"The bills bear internal evidence of the fact that they rested on a basis of not tariff for revenue only, but tariff for pollyously.

"Really, I do not see how he could find it in his heart to veto the Underwood bill, for which there is no basis of fact in the case.

Calls Statement Reckless.

"Never in the history of the government, I venture to say, have important interests been dealt with in such a lighthearted way, with such absolute ignorance of the effect of legislation and with such willingness to sacrifice business interests to political exigencies.

"That is as reckless and unfair a statement as has been put into print since Gutenberg invented movable type, and is a personal reflection on the sense, honesty, integrity, honesty and patriotism of every man, Democrat and Republican, who voted for these bills, which I represent them, not for myself alone, but for all who voted as I did.

"That was a queer and suggestive picture for Democrats and Tariff-reform Republicans to contemplate, the President making a standpat speech at Hamilton, Mass., on the farm of our friend, Senator Augustus Peabody Gardner, flanked on one side by brother Gardner himself and on the other by Gardner's father-in-law, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, chief of protective tariff highbinders. That was enough to make the angels weep.

"The President rushed in to create an issue. We pick up the glove flung into our faces and the forces of the consumers of the land. We gladly accept the issue of battle. We confidently believe that the people will indorse our views and give us the victory, for we have right and truth and justice on our side."

VOTES FOR FANS COME IN FAST

Every Fall some red-hot New England baseball fans spend a lot of their money going to the World's Series of championship baseball games. Having done this, they return home and tell all the other fans what a fine time they had. This makes the other fans envious. They murmur: "Gee, I'd like to see those games."

Well, why don't you? That's the question just now. Instead of wishing you could go, why don't you say: "I will go!"

Why, as guest of the AMERICAN, of course.

This is just another way of saying that the competition in the AMERICAN'S coupon contest for the World's Series is as keen as mustard now. Candidates are bustling and votes are coming in in the heaviest dropping in the Autumn.

The AMERICAN will send ten New England fans to the World's Series free of expense. It all depends on what ten candidates get the most votes. The contest ends October 12. It is open to any person living in New England, irrespective of sex.

A free trip to the World's Series will be happiness enough for any baseball fan. It expresses the total summing up of baseball fun. There's nothing better. You can't beat it.

The contest has been running less than three weeks so far and has over four weeks to go. So it is not half through yet. It is not too late to enter.

Watch the daily AMERICAN for details of the contest and the conditions thereof.

See the next Sunday AMERICAN for first list of candidates' standing with vote totals.

City Hall Notes

There are seven candidates for the Democratic nomination to the Senate from the Eighth Suffolk District, and none of them seem disposed to simplify the situation by withdrawing. Those who are after Senator Curley's seat are ex-Senator John F. Cusick, Edward H. Pinkham, Pierce E. Grence, Charles V. Russell, John J. Cummings, Joseph P. Tarkson and Edward J. Burns. Thomas M. Vinson will get the Republican nomination without opposition.

It will be war to the knife between Congressman Curley and Jim Donovan at the coming caucus. The Ward 17 leader is determined to land Timothy J. Callahan, the anti-Donovan leader of Ward 16, in Senator Doyle's seat, and Donovan declares Doyle will not accept. Ward 16 leader Thomas M. Joyce nominated. The call-board orators and the operator mills will begin after Labor Day.

Senator Nelson Burnham of East Edgecomb, Me., one of the Pine Tree State's oldest Democrats, has written for a seat on the platform at the barbecue of the Democratic city committee at Revere Beach. I have voted for every Democratic candidate for President since I cast my first ballot for Grover Cleveland, and I took over some of our available timber for 1912."

Logan McLean of East Boston has the distinction of being the first to announce his candidacy for the city council. He was in the fight for a while last year but through difficulty over the signatures on his nomination papers withdrew from the contest. He expects the support of the Good Government Association and other reform associations.

Whitney Pays $50,000 for Week's Shooting.

LONDON—Harry Payne Whitney has gone to Scotland for grouse shooting over the famous Hickrick Hall moors of Yorkdale, which he has rented from Earl Strathmore. Besides Mrs. Whitney and their children, the other members of the party include H. Burden and H. Payne Thompson. The party with an enormous quantity of luggage, travelled by special cars. Mr. Whitney expected to remain at Holwerk only a week, but it is estimated it will cost him $50,000.

Rioters Slay Mayor.

NAPLES—A dispatch from Cosenza, the capital of Calabria, reports a serious condition of affairs at Verbicaro. The inhabitants have become furious against the work of the physicians and Red Cross nurses in trying to prevent the spread of cholera. The rioters killed Mayor Misuregna and all the members of his household, as well as several other officials. They burned, in addition to the City Hall, the prefecture, the municipal court, the telegraph office and the mayor's house.

United States Buys Islands.

COLON—The dominions of the United States have been extended by the purchase of four islands in the Pacific. They are near the Pacific coast terminus of the Panama Canal and were bought in part from the Pacific Mail steamship line. The islands are Taboguilla, Naos, Culebra and Perico. The government's desire to acquire the islands through the necessity of building embankments to protect the end of the canal from the heavy currents and the tides of the Balboa.

London Police Get Raise.

LONDON—There have been evidences recently of discontent among the London police over their pay and because of the heavy work incident to the coronation and the labor troubles. Home Secretary Churchill announced that he had decided to grant an increase of pay. Constables will receive 18 pence (36 cents) increase daily; Sergeants 2 shillings (50 cents), and other officers in like proportion.

Wreck Holds Up Kaiser.

BERLIN—The Kaiser was sharply awakened while the imperial train was held up for a time at Lahneck. An incoming train had crashed at full speed into another. The former ordered that the imperial train not to proceed until he was satisfied that none of those injured was seriously hurt.

Ambassador Hill Returning

BERLIN—Ambassador Hill will arrive here on Tuesday from Switzerland for his farewell audience of the Emperor, at which he will present his letters of recall. The ceremony will take place at Potsdam next Saturday.

Ex-Premier Combes Ill.

PARIS—Justin Louis Emile Combes, who was Prime Minister from 1902 to 1905 and who was practically the father of the present anti-separation law, is seriously ill of gastro-enteritis.

PRINCE FLIES IN HEAVY RAIN

in his new Nieuport, he will have to fight for the Boston Light prizes this year. Eerie I., Orington, Tom Sopwith, Arthur Stone and Joseph S. Cummings have speed monoplanes and are out to get the prize money.

Not only these four, but Ely, Beachy and George W. Beatty are going after the prizes with their biplanes if there is a possible chance for the money. They are three of the cleverest flyers on the field, and by expert handling of their machines might overcome the greater speed of the monoplanes.

The events scheduled for to-day were: 3 p. m., bomb dropping; 3.30, speed, six laps, figure eight; 4.30, quick starting; Boston Light flight, and 6, exhibition flying.

The standing of the aviators in today's prize winnings now is: Grahame-White, $4000; Howard W. Gill, $4384; Sopwith, $4410; Beachey, $4170; Beatty, $2282; Ely, $1350; Curtis, $750.

Extra Event for Biplanes.

The contest committee to show that there is no discrimination against biplanes has offered $1,500 for a flight of biplanes around Blue Hills on Thursday.

It is practically announced that the great cross-country flights on Labor Day would be reversed. That is, the biplanes will start one way and the biplanes in the opposite direction.

The course is from Boston to Nashua, N. H.; Worcester, Mass.; Providence, R. I., and back to the aviation field at Atlantic.

One flock of the flyers will go over the course in that way, the other flock will go from Boston to Providence, R. I., Worcester, Mass., to Nashua, N. H., back to the aviation field at Atlantic. In this way both flocks, after leaving Boston, will meet at Worcester, coming from opposite directions, and will continue on through the circle in opposite directions from that point.

This will give Nashua and Providence two stiffs instead of one, and Boston and Worcester will see all the flyers start and finish, come and coming to and from opposite directions.

CONTESTANTS' NOTICE
PLEASE READ THE FOLLOWING CAREFULLY
The official American PROVERB BOOK runs alphabetically only as far as the first letter of the proverb is concerned, viz: All the A's together, all the B's together, etc., etc., etc. There are no proverbs used for several letters of the alphabet, but every contestant should be careful that the pages are numbered in order from 1 to 75, inclusive. If pages are incorrectly numbered, in any case, return BOOK to Contest Department and correctly numbered book will be sent. Contestants should follow closely the spelling and punctuation of the official BOOK in all cases.
CONTEST RULES WILL BE PRINTED IN WEDNESDAY'S EVENING AMERICAN

Renewing Complexions By Absorption

If your complexion is marred with blotches, moth patches, pimples or freckles, it's useless to putter with powders and paints, lotions, cream and things, in an effort to get rid of the trouble. Unless you have some ability as an artist you'll mar you appearance still more.

The new and rational way is to take off the complexion itself, with all its offensive faults. Dissolve just one ounce of pure mercolized wax at the druggist's and use at night same as cold cream. Remove next morning with water and soap, following with dash of cold water. The mercolized wax absorbs the half-dead scarf skin in flaky particles, so gradually that no one guesses you're treating your face—unless it be by the result, which is truly wonderful. There's nothing like it for restoring a natural, healthy and beautiful complexion.—Aunt Sally.

ENTRIES STILL COMING FAST FOR AMERICAN'S SWIMMING CONTEST

Rose Pitonof to Give Exhibition in Charles River Before Race for Girls.

The most interesting athletic event in New England next Saturday afternoon will be the AMERICAN'S swimming match for New England girl amateurs in the Charles River lower basin, preceded by a diving and fancy stroke exhibition by Miss Rose Pitonof.

This will be a splendid spectacle for the public.

It will be free, in the first place.

There will be plenty of opportunity to see it to advantage. The broad esplanades along the river bank, the big bridges which span the stream and the roofs of buildings commanding the water will afford natural balconies from which to watch the fair contestants.

A swimming match, especially by girls, is a fascinating sight. The swimmers, who average surprisingly young, are as graceful in the water as possible. The progress of all contestants can easily be watched as the course is upstream, around a turning buoy and back to the starting line.

Miss Pitonof's Feats.

In addition to the actual contest there will be a splendid exhibition of fancy swimming and diving, just before the race, by Miss Rose Pitonof, the marvelous young professional. The public will have a chance to see the feats which make Miss Pitonof one of the premier "headliners" in vaudeville.

Many people in Greater Boston have no idea of the number of remarkable girl swimmers there are in New England. Some of them, who have attained professional fame, are widely known to the public.

But there are many amateur girl swimmers who are wonderfully clever in the water. It will be a gentle treat to some people to see what they can do.

The race should be exciting. There is great rivalry among the contestants, especially among the crack ones. Different beaches have their local champions. The question to be settled by the race is, Who is the champion? Of them, the girl who is to win the AMERICAN'S championship trophy.

Entries are still coming in. There are over thirty already. Among them are girls

Rose Pitonof, Boston's famous girl swimmer, is loud in her praise of the AMERICAN'S "picking the girls a chance" in athletic sports as instanced in the American's swimming contest for girls in the Charles River Lower Basin next Saturday afternoon. Miss Pitonof, who has won laurels as a swimmer, and is the heroine of the New York to Coney Island record swim recently, will give an exhibition just before the contest.

who have made remarkable records, both as dash and distance swimmers.

Everything in Readiness.

The AMERICAN, with the splendid cooperation of the Metropolitan Park Commission and the Metropolitan Park police, has completed arrangements for the contest. The course will be carefully patrolled. Life-savers under Maffitt Flaherty will follow the contestants in the water. Every necessary provision for the safety of the contestants before and after the match and all other details have been attended to.

Miss Rose Pitonof, who is to give an exhibition at 2 o'clock, just before the race, is enthusiastic about the race itself. She is a professional swimmer also cannot, of course, enter, but she is glad that the race is being held. She knows just how much these matches encourage other girls. In fact, she was through winning the AMERICAN'S swimming race At Revere Park a few years ago that Miss Pitonof first became prominent. She has since made a wonderful record as a swimmer. She swam to Boston Light. She swam twenty-four miles at Coney Island in eight hours and seven minutes, breaking all records for that distance. Now she enjoys international fame. Regarding the race next Saturday, she says:

"It is one of the best things the AMERICAN could have done.

Miss Pitonof Enthusiastic.

"Why we girls have never had any race for three miles before, and, although I cannot compete in it, yet I know of some excellent girls who will swim in this match. I think it will be exciting.

"The girls get so little done for them. It's always the boys in games. But now the girls have a chance through the kindness of the AMERICAN and they will show what they can do.

"This is just what I wanted to see in Boston for a long time. Of course what I was going to do in the exhibition is to show some of the different strokes in swimming, and what it is to dive. Why girls can do some fun out of life if they can dive. It's a wonderful thing in the water to dive, and what I am going to tell the crowds next Saturday is that you must not get frightened in the water. You can keep afloat by a simple rule. I never think once about my breath as some girls ask about me. You don't get excited in the water. That is what I am going to prove. I am going to close the exhibition after showing how every girl can learn to be safe with life saving experience. This will be worth seeing.

"Then I am going to tell the girls that swimming is the best exercise in the world to develop your strength.

"If I go into the water every day during the Summer, and I think, that every girl goes into the water. I learned to swim at this beach, and I know many of the girls who have learned where I did. Oh, I think it's simply great. This coming match. So many girls that I know will be there. I am thinking that I was never more so anxious.

"I hope that they will wrap the winner in the American flag as they did with me. When I finished swimming this Summer down at Coney Island, I had one four yards long and two and a half yards wide. I'd like to wrap a flag around the winner of this AMERICAN race."

Entrants listed with the Swimming Editor of the AMERICAN up to last night were:

NO WAR, SAYS GERMAN PRESS

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—That Germany sees no chances of conflict with France over Morocco and that a peaceful settlement of the North African territorial dispute is near is the emphatic declaration made today by the Lokal Anzeiger. The newspaper declares the statement is semi-official, declares that the German government is so confident of a satisfactory agreement with France that it has officially notified all the other powers to that effect. Those who form their conclusions from this section of the press interpreted this utterance to mean that Germany is already aware of the complete contents of the French ultimatum which has been drawn up for presentation to the German government.

To all outward appearances Germany's attitude is as firm as ever and so far she has made no efforts to remove the offending warships from the port of Agadir, Morocco.

You are the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

A Home Recipe For Removing Wrinkles

(From Woman's National Journal.)

Who will blame the modern woman for trying to look as young and attractive as she reasonably can? Why should she be placed at a disadvantage in numerous ways by wearing wrinkles, if she can avoid these hateful marks of advancing age?

Few women, however, know what to do to effectually rid themselves of wrinkles or sagginess. None of the advertised preparations is satisfactory, and most of them are very expensive. But a very simple and harmless home remedy, which any woman can make, will work wonders when all the patent preparations fail.

Buy an ounce of powdered saxolite at any drug store. Dissolve the whole ounce in a half pint of witch hazel and use it as a wash lotion. The results are practically instantaneous. Marked improvement is noticed immediately after the very first trial. Wrinkles and sagging are corrected, and the face feels so refreshed and smug-like.

MRS. DE FOREST CAN KEEP BABY

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—A weekly letter, telling all about the "$5,000 suffrage baby" of Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of the wireless telegraph, and Mrs. Nora Blatch De Forest, will be mailed each Monday morning in this city and sent to Dr. De Forest in San Francisco.

Justice Bischoff, in the Supreme Court, handed down a decision which directs Mrs. De Forest to write this letter to her husband. If the baby is neglected, the place to another the father also is to be made acquainted with her location.

CHAMP CLARK SAYS PRESIDENT GARBLED FACTS.

QUINCY, Ill., Aug. 29.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives is going after President Taft for his speech at Hamilton, Mass., Saturday. He said to-day he would reply to it. "President Taft will hear from me, for I am going after him with hammer and tongs," said Mr. Clark. "The Insurgents can take care of themselves, but I will reply for the Democrats."

Mr. Clark declares President Taft was unfair and garbled facts in his Hamilton address.

HOLD BOY FOR $10,000 RANSOM

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Seven-year-old Vincento Sabella, only son of Vincento Sabella, sr., a grocer and importer living at No. 500 Broome street, has been since July 31 in the hands of kidnapers who are holding him for a ransom of $10,000. Unless the money is forthcoming accordingly no longer received by his father the little boy will be cut up into pieces and his remains sent to his parents.

In the last of the six letters received a skull and bones were enclosed in a box of blood, and in the letter it was stated that the blood was from little Vincento's ear, clipped with scissors, because the ransom had not yet been sent.

DIRT DERAILS MONTREAL TRAIN

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Aug. 29.—Dirt, washed down by the rains of the railroad running to East St. Johnsbury to the right of way, caused the wreck of the eight o'clock northbound express of the Montreal, Maine & Atlantic railroad at Lake Channel this morning.

The nearest to passengers were mail clerks, Fred Ray and A. A. Humphrey and Fireman H. W. Jackson were injured, the latter probably fatally.

The train was running at a high rate of speed when the engine left the rails for a distance of 200 feet and turned completely over on its port side.

The front trucks on the baggage car were also derailed.

MRS. SINCLAIR A PATHFINDER TO LIBERTY FOR HER "SISTERS"

I am an individual living in the world and I have a right to my own life. I am going to get rid of my impediment and become a free person. But I shall do it in a way that will point out something to my sex. I hope in my course of action to be of benefit to them. I want to find the way of freedom, but I also want to point out the path to my sisters.

I believe that my case points to a crying need. The woman should be independent of, not dependent upon, her husband. Many a wife is obliged to live with her husband because of this financial relation, when, if she were independent, she would leave him at once.

I believe that socialism should come and the women as well as the men should work only four or five hours a day, and that the woman should be independent. Under the present system, when she works she becomes merely a slave with less independence than ever. I shall be a martyr, but I shall point out the way. I shall not contest—at least so far as I now know—my husband's suit.—Statement by Mrs. Upton Sinclair after being served with divorce papers.

SINCLAIR BIDS HIS WIFE GOOD-BY

Mrs. Upton Sinclair and Harry Kemp

Divorce Papers in Novelist's Suit Served at a Merry Family Party.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Quick for every latest thing in the catching of divorce, will have absolutely nothing further to say on the case.

Mr. Kemp's slender form and peaked face had already vanished in the Broadway crowds.

Prudish Sex Puritanism.

Worn out after a day filled as she expressed it with "Mr. Kemp, Mr. Sinclair and divorce papers," Mrs. Upton Sinclair lay back among the pillows in her mistress's home and talked upon questions that make for stunning marriages. In the course of her extraordinary arguments she called "prudish sex puritanism" and "unessential monogamy" gave expression to the above sentiments affecting the "prudish puritanism of the sex question."

Mrs. Sinclair declared that it was quite in the order of things that an honest good man such as her husband should be an unessential monogamist, but that unfortunately such a man was not capable of being a successful husband because of the short-comings of mankind for which he was not personally responsible.

"Monogamy is the original impulse of every woman with pluck," she said. "This is natural, but the world has spotted it, and her desire to be a marriage grows distasteful and surest. A perfect marriage is, as we see a great deal of, a wonderful expression of music. Just because every one has not the genius of finding the ideal, the complement of himself or herself, it should not be looked upon as a crime that such is the fact. It is the environment almost total experience in marriage.

"She and the knowledge of the meaning of sex is the most important thing in the world. It is the best understood thing. It is ignorance that results from such unmeaning prudery that has been the cause of so much mental and moral deficiencies with, with wonder, when a mother in a needless brings a child up in a meaningless, pitiable idea this question doing the most irreparable injury."

She Understands Kemp.

It is unfortunate that such is the case and yet every honest man or man with intelligent understanding of sex knows in his heart of hearts that what I say is the truth.

Mr. Sinclair brought suit against me for divorce. I was served with the papers, but I have not looked at them. I am leaving them for a fresh morning mood.

"You ask if Mr. Kemp is mentioned. It does not make the slightest difference to me or to Mr. Kemp if he is or not. I stand and I am proud happy to have known Mr. Kemp as well as wonderful. He has the most perfect poet mind and heart and soul and being that I know.

"And yet you put the question to me directly. If I shall marry Mr. Kemp after I am divorced I could not say. I do not know.

"Today I feel in his friendship the most perfect harmony of soul that I have ever known. He meets me on the same plane of understanding he has the same values of life and of living that I have, and yet, I cannot say whether we will ever marry or not.

"In being honest and frank about my marriage with Mr. Sinclair, I do not wish to be understood as criticising him in a small petty way. No matter what he does to the future I shall always think kindly and speak kindly of him. He shouldn't? I have been his wife for seven years—travelled the road and having some beautiful experiences with him.

"For a long time Mr. Sinclair and I have looked out upon life from a different perspective. We have felt the widening out of misunderstanding and spiritual isolation. It has taken years for this thought to crystallize, but now it has become for two sensible, unnormal and two considerate people to go along in mind agreed as considerate people to go along in mind agreed as considerate women and men are doing in life today.

Women Are Not Free.

"And what! That is the great question —what? It is largely because women are not economically independent and because either the woman or the man has been cobbled up to the other.

"Mostly always it is a jelly fish that she more seldom than often loses sight of. I feel that one is a radical thinking human being task by the same thing, and that the same desires, ambitions and sentiments that govern the male being.

"When more women like me have delved into the question and felt the unfitness of her real womanhood as a wife—then she would be ready for reconstruction in a higher, more ideal standard of living.

"Material and physical attributes are looked upon with too much importance, but as chastity is made the basis virtue of womanhood, the reality is to be the most important thing to the highest womanhood for if a woman is pure in mind and soul in her actions, no matter what, will of power, she is pure and honest she can do no wrong, to herself or to society.

"I am of the artistic temperament and my husband is of the intellectual," continued Mrs. Sinclair. "He lives entirely by intellectual and arrives at all of his conclusions by processes of intellect. I, on the contrary, arrive at a truth through my emotions and then store it away in my intellectual regions for future reference.

"My husband believes in monogamy intensely, but he is not fitted to hold the interest of our woman. He is secretly and intensely conservative in nature, though trying hard to be a radical. I am the real radical.

Difference of Temperaments.

"We finally decided two years ago that I should be free to find some one else. I was horrified when I found myself able to be interested in another man, and yet I could be."

Kemp sighed pitifully.

"My, but I've been under a nervous strain," said he, "and this will kill me for Kansas. I'll never be able to go back there."

Mrs. Sinclair turned on the poet.

"Oh, forget Kansas, Harry," she said. Harry sighed again.

"I don't want to forget Kansas," he complained. "I like the people there immensely, but they'll never have anything more to do with me after they read of this. This will kill me in Kansas."

"I believe in trial marriages," said Mrs. Sinclair, and then the poet looked hopeful and for the moment did "forget Kansas."

"I believe in them, too," said he. "People should have a chance to find out whether they are really suited to each other."

No Need of Ceremony, Says She.

"I also believe," went on Mrs. Sinclair, "that there should be no need because the married pair. I believe that under another and proper social order probably socialism—they would remain together as long as love endured, and that there would be no need of any interior ceremony, or even a civil contract."

"How would you keep track of the children, and how would you prevent disatisfied couples from [illegible] the foundling asylums with their offspring when they tired?" asked the reporter.

"Well, there is some excuse for the present system with human nature as it is at present constituted," admitted Mrs. Sinclair, "but under the ideal system and with the people of the ideal they would not do such dreadful things."

The poet here put in:

"Mrs. Sinclair is perfectly right. There is no need for bonds to tie people together."

Marriage? They Blushed.

"Are you going to marry Mr. Kemp?" the reporter asked of her. She and the poet blushed.

"I can't say," he answered. "We haven't made up our minds, and we don't want to say anything about that just now."

Mrs. Sinclair looked at Kemp in a reassuring fashion.

"We can't tell," she supplemented. "It may be just as well to wait. We are very well suited to one another. I haven't seen much of him and I can't tell whether we shall regret the course we contemplate or not. But we feel that we are suited to each other and that our relation is perfect enough for us to marry. Yes, if we found out that we were suited to each other we would probably marry."

Sinclair told me the other night that you and Kemp had gone to Atlantic City," suggested the reporter. "Is that so?"

Mrs. Sinclair laughed.

"Did I elope with you, Harry? Did I meet you by the monument? No. Why not? You must have been waiting for me in the crowd, dear."

The Poet Likes New York.

She added, seriously:

"No it isn't true. The statement by my husband that I was going to Kansas with me was what brought Harry and me together. We decided just as long as there was all this publicity that we might as well do something. I did not see Mr. Kemp until he arrived.

The poet was engaged in a publishing building.

"Say," he said, "I like New York. It's a darn good place. I guess I'll have to live here after this. The newspapers are going to print me out of Kansas. Mrs. Sinclair won't say about me out in Kansas."

Mrs. Sinclair, who is a few years older than the poet of romantic years, smiled indulgently.

"Kansas!" she snorted. "Well if people are bourgeois and have bourgeois minds they will think as they do in Kansas."

She Got Good-By.

"Are you going to defend the suit?"

A Lesson to Her "Sisters."

"I shall not," replied the novelist's wife. "I am an individual living in the world and I have a right to my own life. I am going to get rid of my impediment and become a free person. But I shall do it in a way that will point out something to my sex. I hope in my course of action to be of some use to them. I want to find the way of freedom, but I also want to point out the path to my sisters.

"I believe that my case points to a crying need. The woman should be independent of, not dependent upon, her husband. Many a wife is obliged to live with her husband because of this financial relation, when, if she were independent, she would leave him at once.

"Yes, many married women in Kansas and elsewhere are hypocrites," said the poet. "I believe that socialism should come, and the women as well as the men should work only four or five hours a day, and that the woman should be independent. I believe in that. Under the present system, when she works she becomes merely a slave with less independence than ever. I shall be a martyr, but I shall point out the way. I shall not contest—at least so far as I now know—my husband's suit."

Met in a Sanatorium.

Mrs. Sinclair said she had been introduced to Kemp by her husband when the latter was at Battle Creek (Mich.) sanatorium. Subsequently he visited them in the winter home at Arden, Del. She had gone to Arden with him freely.

"But up to the present we have been only friends," she said. "I can't say how long I shall go away with him for a long rest. And on that point I refuse to say. That is Sinclair's business. All I have found it good to restore one to health.

"Sinclair and I are very friendly. In fact he visited me at Arden. He went right into town and told him that I wanted to take a machine ride. He accompanied me and he said, 'Well, Meta, I'll help you.' When [illegible] the chauffeur will not interest you and I'll telephone to him. Good day.'

Then Mrs. Sinclair and Kemp started for a long ride on a Fifth avenue bus.

"Sinclair and I are very friendly," said Sinclair, to the reporter. "Mr. Kemp and I are going to have a long talk today about poetry."

Before they went the poet told the reporter the name of the play he was writing. Mrs. Sinclair, when she telephoned that he would while Sinclair, for he had been engaged to her in a hotel Kemp said:

"Oh, that's beautiful and wonderful. Here were the husband, the wife and the other man. Isn't that the theme of many of the plays that are written nowadays? I had been working on my poems on the bikes, the rough work of a member of the opera girl material for poems. I stopped off at Battle Creek on my way back to the east recently and there met Mrs. Sinclair. We became only slightly acquainted at that time, but we found each other congenial. Mrs. Sinclair—you may not know this—writes very creditable verse.

"After that we exchanged two or three letters—not more. I should say—and I did not see her again until I came East this month.

Poems From a Cattle Train.

"I worked my way East taking care of cattle on a cattle train, again to get material for poems. I have written one poem as a result of the trip, but it has not yet been published. I had two reasons for coming East. One of them was to get a publisher for my verses, the other for to see if I could not get a play I have written produced. This latter task I figure I would take up until October anyway, and when I finally found a manager who would accept the play and had done whatever I had to do in connection with it I planned to start on another trip around the world.

"Upton had given me an open invitation to visit him at Arden. I may as well admit that I had misgivings about going there for I felt that everything was going to hop pen and I made arrangements for a shack down on the long island coast in which to spend the Summer roughing it. Well, anyhow, I did accept Upton's invitation and I did go to Arden. I went all of a sudden. Upton gave me a week's notice of my coming. It was a hunt he used in the day-time for writing in.

"Arden is Sinclair and I were thrown together a great deal and we became better acquainted. She was the most congenial woman in Arden to me, and I felt that we were comparatively adjusted to each other. We criticised each other's poetry and read together and took long walks. The present situation evolved itself from these things which I have told you.

Wants Tangle Straightened.

"I am content with the present situation. By that I mean that I think enough of the Sinclair group, if you will, to do anything I can and to play any part assigned me if their affairs can be righted. I want the somewhat tangled situation to be straightened out in a way that will bring about the happiness of all concerned.

"I don't know yet what that way will be, but time will show. It is an unfortunate thing that there have to be divorce proceedings, but now that they have come—well, anyway, the present situation has come through an attempt to live up to our ideals. I don't pose as a martyr, but you know as well as I do that everything that has been done in this world has been done by people who believed they were right and then went ahead. We believe that we are right."

Mr. Kemp said that he had no power to make to Mr. Sinclair's statement "and if the persons involved in it were of the usual sort probably would be attacks and incriminations and recriminations. But we are not of that sort."

Mrs. Sinclair, wife of the author, and Kemp, the poet of Kansas, plan to marry when Sinclair gets a divorce.

SEE SEA MONSTER AT LONG WHARF

Invitations are to be issued to the principals of schools in Greater Boston to see the sea monster of the encrusted and plated lizard family now on exhibition at the end of Long wharf. Great interest has been aroused in the monster, and scores of people come to see it every day. It is a descendant of the diplodarus, which weighed twenty tons and devoured 700 pounds of leaves and twigs daily. In height this giant ancestor measured from forty to sixty feet. The opinion of scientists is that the monster now on exhibition is one of the few surviving types of the large members of the reptile family. A New York motion picture house has sent a photographer on to take pictures as the lecturer describes the monster to the crowds. Arrangements are being made for its exhibits in several cities in New England.

DETROIT SHOW OF 1912 MODELS

By J. C. KERRIBON.

The first exhibition of 1912 models, both commercial and pleasure, is to be held in Detroit September 18 to 22. This will be the first of the big shows of 1912 and will be several months ahead of what has heretofore been the first show of the early models.

It is possible to have such an exhibition as this in Detroit, owing to its being the largest automobile manufacturing centre in the world. Every foot of space in the hall to be used for exhibition purposes has already been taken by exhibitors, among whom will be the Jackson, Cole, Studebaker Corporation, Rapid, Brush, Rose, Hupmobile, Detroit Motor Wagon Company, Chalmers, Commerce Motor Car Company, Elmore, Hudson, Bay Utility, Lion, General Motors, Abbott-Detroit, Cartercar, Regal, Oakland, Everitt, Cadillac, Ford, Overland, Detroit Electric, United Motors, Seitz, Mitchell-Lewis and many others. In each case the exhibitors promise to make displays of the completed lines for the coming year. In many cases the cars will be shown for the first time.

The Automobile Club of America is strongly advocating what is termed a clean-up day for 1911, when the new law prohibiting the defacement of signposts, milestones and danger signals without permission of the property owner, goes into effect in New York State.

On that same day it has been suggested that everybody interested in the future welfare of the Empire State use his or her influence that the general improvement of the appearance of the country side, the small villages, the towns and even the cities.

Home-creating New York State is not any child's play. In some places trees have been covered from the roots up high up the trunk as the energetic bill poster has been able to reach every old building near the highway has been converted into a crazy-quilt advertising sign; every corner fence has been covered.

To Succeed You Must SLEEP!

THE hardest work in a man's life comes when he is struggling to get a foothold. Young men often over-estimate their strength in the intense absorption required by business affairs. Barnum, the great showman, attributed his success in dealing with vast schemes and infinite detail, to his ability to forget it all in refreshing sleep.

Any young man who knows that he is discounting his chances of success through loss of sleep should be wary of any remedy that contains habit-inducing drugs.

STATE HUNTING FOR GRAFTERS

As an outcome of the latest startling disclosures in the big Worcester graft investigation, it was declared today at the State House that the Attorney General would start a rigid inquiry to fix the blame for the alleged frauds. The Worcester county Grand Jury will also be asked to investigate.

Mayor James Logan of Worcester to-day ordered the city police department to investigate Alderman Michael F. Comerford's declaration that he had been offered $400 to "let up" in the investigations. It is alluted at Worcester City Hall that the police department "looked" the information when Comerford made his charges.

It was pointed out to-day that the State would have been a heavy loser in the excessive Boston & Albany grade crossing removal jobs, if payments had not been summarily stopped by Attorney General Swift.

Alderman Talks Bribe.

These revelations were made following closely upon Alderman Comerford's statement that an effort had been made to bribe him to let up in the Worcester investigation.

Attorney General Swift has stopped payment of the State's share of the Worcester grade crossing work developed to-day, because an investigation by State Engineer Henry W. Hayes showed that the work was not up to standard and the State was being overcharged. This is the latest outcome of the Worcester graft exposures, whose investigation was resumed to-day by the Worcester City Council.

State Engineer Hayes, testifying before the Worcester committee, revealed for the first time the fact that the State had investigated the work since July 24 and found that it was not up to specifications. "We don't want to pay $5 for a $2 job," he declared.

While saying that, in his opinion, the retaining walls of the Boston & Albany grade crossing abolition scheme were not in danger of caving in, Hayes declared:

"There has been violation of the specifications in the work now under way. The work came to our attention July 24, and I have investigated. Since then I have made three written reports. No money has been paid by the State for the work.

"The gravel, for four weeks, has not been screened and has been put in as received from the pits at North Wilbraham. The State has notified the Boston & Albany railroad that no money is to be paid on either the New England Construction Company or the Walsh contracts now under way. This will probably bring the matter before the courts for settlement.

Hayes declared that more sand and less cement were being used than called for by specification. "In my opinion," he said, however, "the wall is strong enough, but we don't want to pay $5 for a $2 job."

Engineer Hayes admitted that the State had had no inspector on the job. In explaining that, in his opinion, none had been needed because it was a railroad job, one that would have to be maintained by the railroad company, and if it caved in the railroad company, and if it caved in it would have to be rebuilt by the railroad.

Hayes said that the total cost of the two contracts, payment thereon having been stopped, is about $400,000, of which Worcester's share would be about $140,000.

Reported to Police.

He explained that Walsh & Co. had the contract to build the walls west of the North Worcester station, and the New England Construction Company the contract to build the walls east of the station. About 4,000 yards of the walls have been finished.

Joseph H. Deady of No. 23 Cutler street, Worcester, a salesman for M. J. Flinnegan & Co. of that city, is declared by Alderman Michael J. Comerford of Worcester to have known of the alleged offer of a $400 bribe to Comerford. "I have nothing to add now to say about the statement of Alderman Comerford," said Deady.

"I have reported the matter to the police," said Comerford to-day. "It is now up to the District Attorney to act if he sees fit."

ROADS IN WEST ARE OPTIMISTIC

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has announced that his road is entering upon a campaign of retrenchment and will dispense with every possible man. Not so the railroads running into Chicago. One road has jobs put on 2500 men. None have laid off any employes nor do they propose to do so for the present at least. When Winter sets in certain work will be impossible. It always is impossible, but until that time, unless something most unforseen occurs, every man will hold his job.

Some roads say that business conditions are poor, but they do not expect those conditions to continue forever. None have become panic stricken and none is harboring toward any breakneck retrenchment.

Improvement to Come.

All are waiting and watching hopefully for an improvement in conditions and instead of making wholesale cuts in expenses, are caring for their present business and preparing for that and better business.

Here are the opinions expressed by some of the greatest railroad men in the country:

By Darius Hill, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy: "We have not and do not expect to lay off any employes, for the present at least. To be sure business is not very good, but we have no large construction work on hand and are simply waiting to see how conditions adjust themselves and are buying for no improvement.

"Usually there is a slump about May 1, continuing through June. This year that same slump occurred, but there was a more appreciable slump during July, and August having been worse than July.

"Undoubtedly conditions are rather poor all along the line, and at the present time, when business is usually on the rise, there is a very general falling off. Notwithstanding this, we do not expect to lay off any employes."

All Employes Retained.

"These conditions cannot continue indefinitely and we do not propose to hurry into any retrenchment which may be wholly unnecessary. When business does improve we want to have a force adequate to handle that improvement.

"I wish I knew just what is responsible for the present conditions. Though the next presidential election and the tariff question are still considerably disturbed, they both probably have much to do with the situation.

"I do not mean by this that the triumph of a party will bring prosperity, but one will cause a tremendous boom, but it is a fact that prior to a presidential election there is more or less depression. The people of the country do not know what is going to happen, and in the absence of that knowledge are unable to adjust their business affairs accordingly. But this road is not laying off any employes.

Waiting for Developments.

By B. P. Ripley, president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad: "Our road is not laying off any men nor have we plans for any general policy of retrenchment. We are simply waiting to see what will happen during the last quarter of two.

"Undoubtedly business is dull and there is a perceptible falling off just as the time honored custom has been heretofore. No one appears to know the reason for it. 'Canadian reciprocity' it certainly has affected this road and I am inclined to think it is due to the Canadian border to know whether or not they are going to vote reciprocity.

"The depression appears to be general all over the country and, in view of the agitation regarding the coming presidential election and the tariff question, a reason for a part of it might be assigned in that direction.

"We have no large construction work on hand, but you may be sure that every department is doing its work with its full complement of employes and we do not expect to decrease our force, for the present at least.

Change Must Come.

"This is not the first time in the history of the country that business has been dull, but it has always previously picked up and will pick up this year. It cannot continue for very long, unless something most unexpected should occur, but we are waiting.

"Conditions may become worse but we shall be forced to retrench, but that time has not yet arrived."

By W. A. Gardner, president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad: "We shall conform with business requirements. We shall expend with the requirements of business and contract with its contraction, but for the present at least we are not laying off any employes nor do we anticipate such a move.

"Business is below the average, but while there has been a slump in the iron and steel business and in the lumber line, crops are good and the average is thereby only comparatively depressed.

"Business should be picking up at this time, of the year, but for some reason which I cannot explain it is not nearly so good as we wish.

"There is a difference of opinion regarding the cause of this present depression. Some believe that the impending Presidential election is causing it. For my part I cannot see it.

"The tariff? Excuse us. I would rather say nothing about the tariff nor the Canadian reciprocity question. I will say, however, that I am not in favor of the latter has especially become considerable of a political issue.

"So far as we are concerned the situation is this: We must have a certain number of men to do a certain amount of work. If we have not got them to do, then we cannot have the employes to do it, but we are taking care of our business and hoping for more."

By W. L. Park, vice-president of the Illinois Central Railroad: "Instead of laying off any employes, we put on about 250 extra men last week in our maintenance of way department and we do not anticipate any retrenchment. We propose to go right ahead and take care of all the business that comes our way.

"While there may be some business depression in certain directions, it has not been none with us. Our gross earnings for the past month have been greater than those of last year during the same period and those of last year were greater than those of the previous year."

RED SOX PLAY FINAL GAME IN THE WEST TO-DAY

RAY BRONSON IN MAIN BOUT AT ARMORY A. A.

By JACK CONWAY.

"Wife, dear, I won't be home until late this evening," said Dennis Aspinwall as he finished his breakfast of bacon and eggs. "You know that I am getting along in years and there is no hurrying when I shall have to vacate this little planet of ours. Therefore I thought it was about time that I should have a few hours' conversation with my friend Reggie Sweeney, the undertaker. It is no intention this evening to select the coffin which will contain my table remains when the boys are gathered around saying 'Well, don't he look natural.' I think it will be best for me to arrange these minor details now so as to save you and the kids the trouble after I have started for Davy Jones's locker."

And in a few minutes Dennis had passed out into the cold dreary world, while his little wife sadly thought of the day when she would have to set sail on husband No. 2.

To make a long story short, Dennis had not the least intention of going to see his friend, Reggie Sweeney, the undertaker. In fact, Reggie had been down at Dough's Neck for the past three weeks.

Like many another loving husband and son, Reggie was giving an excuse so that he, too, could avoid and see the boiling show up at the Armory to-night. And if you look closely you will see Dennis up in the Tremont street club this evening with little or no fingers etc., etc., after Ray Bronson and Tommy Howell swap wallops in a twelve-round battle.

Fighters Evenly Matched.

This bout promises to be one of the best pulled off hereabouts for a long time. Both boys are among the best lightweights in the country and as what a great deal depends upon the result of to-night's controversy.

This will be the first time that Bronson has shown his prowess in this ring since he completed his trip around the globe with his last appearances in this city. Ray sent Tommy O'Keefe to the mat after three rounds of fast fighting.

The Indianapolis mitt dispenser has already met the greatest array of topnotch big lightweights in the country. The only real black mark on Ray's card is his fight with Freddie Welsh, when the Englishman knocked him out in the fifteenth round.

Shortly after going down to defeat before Welsh, Bronson, on a trip to Australia, met Jackey McFarland in New Orleans, in a twelve-round bout in the ring. Ray soundly conceded Bronson a shade of a chance against the dapper Windy City pugilist. Bronson, however, went to and won the decision from the man who is scheduled to meet Ad Wolgast in Milwaukee, September 15.

Bronson has won two decisions from both Matty Baldwin and Dixie Davidson, two of the best local lightweights.

Howell Is Some Scrapper.

Jack Harry Howell, the Indianapolis fighter will meet a worthy foeman. Howell has fought twice in this city. In his first appearance he knocked out Fighting Dick Nelson, while on his second engagement he won a close decision from Young Donahue of Roxbury.

Bronson is a great boxer, while Howell is more of a fighter. Local fans are wondering who will win, the boxer or the fighter. This bout has even got the cafe gentry, who take a flyer on their conscientious guessing.

Everett Eldridge meets Joe Nelson in an eight-round semi-final, while Frankie Sherman will meet Jack Muncie in a six-round bout. The curtain raiser is a six-round scrap between Al Bates and Bill McDonald.

Boxing Results In Many Cities

AT BALTIMORE, George Cheney of that city knocked out young McCue in the third round of a fifteen-round bout. McCue never had a chance. He took the count of nine in the first and second round.

AT SYRACUSE, Kid Julian of that city won a popular decision over Young Hoskins in a ten-round bout. Cotter took a bad beating in the semi-final.

AT EASTPORT, Me., Al Raleigh of Brooklyn, N. Y., failed to stop George Medel, the Syrian slugger, in a twelve-round bout. The Syrian took a bad beating, but never in serious trouble.

AT NEW YORK, Joe Stein had the better of Jimmy Tracy in their bout at the Lenox Athletic Club. These two men were substituted for George Cotton (Kid) Wilson and Young Terry English of Albany, Cotton refused to meet English as the latter weighed more than 158 pounds.

HAYES WINS FROM ONE-ROUND HOGAN

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 29.—Ginger Hayes, who substituted for Tommy Langdon, had little trouble in defeating Ogo Round Hogan in the wind-up at the National A. C. last evening. Hogan was inclined to rough it and used his head and shoulders in the clinches at every opportunity. He was warned by the referee a number of times, but he didn't pay any attention to the referee, except in the third round.

BILLY PHOENIX HAS TAKEN A PARTNER

Billy Phoenix the South Boston boy who is covering the middle curation for the Lawrence team of the New England League, was yesterday married to Miss Mary I. Shaughnessy of Fall River. The news was a big surprise to his many friends.

CHECKS GO TO 'DAFFY' WINNERS

"It's here!"

The "Daffydil Habit" is sweeping over New England like a prairie fire.

Everybody's got "the bug."

The Contest Department of the Boston AMERICAN is engaged to-day sending out the checks for the $50 in cash prizes awarded last Sunday, and also 500 copies of "Tad's" famous daffydil book which were awarded to the authors of the prize winning daffydils.

Three hundred book prizes and $50 in cash are the awards offered for the best daffydils received this week up to Thursday night.

Why not try your luck?

You may win a cash prize, but surely if you give the matter any thought, you will earn for yourself a copy of "Tad's" famous book.

You may send as many daffydils as you choose, but be sure and have them in the mail by Thursday.

Here are some that just arrived:

If a baker can make a jelly roll, can he make abundance?—A. W. Hilton, No. 20 Mechanic street, Milford, Mass.

If Brindley holds the world's altitude record, would that make foreign aviators sore?—Edward Liberty, No. 95½ Canterbury street, Worcester, Mass.

When the housekeeper economizes, does she skirt waist?—Anna McMullen, Main street, North Easton, Mass.

If Lawrence owns a half a million, how much does Ohio?—Mary Finnegan, 472 Gorham street, Lowell, Mass.

If a horse eats hay, what can alcohol?—John Buckley, Jr., 221 Harvard street, Cambridge.

If a carpenter can talk, can a peruse plaster?—Joseph Foley, Walpole, Mass., box 262.

If Roosevelt asked for credit would the steel trust?—H. G. Fales, 75 Franham street, Lawrence.

If the Atlantic is called ocean, why do they call Chelsea? V. Erickson, 19 Argle street, Everett.

If the Saxonia is bound for Europe, where is Whittier's Snow-bound?

If the compass points to the north, where does City Hall?—P. B. Hall, or Warren avenue, Boston.

THE RULES.

Mail your daffydils to the Daffydil Editor, Boston AMERICAN, P. O. Box 3047 Boston, Mass.

Write on one side of the paper only. Sign your full name and address.

The best daffydils sent in during the week, up to Thursday, will be published in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The writers of the daffydils published in the Sunday AMERICAN will be awarded prizes.

Every daffydil published in the Sunday AMERICAN will draw a prize, either cash or book.

Ten sample daffydils will be published each weekday. But these printed as samples in the daily AMERICAN will not necessarily win prizes. Only those selected for the Sunday AMERICAN will be prize winners.

POST-SEASON SERIES FOR EASTERN LEAGUE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—At a meeting of the directors of the Eastern League here yesterday it was decided to play a post-season series to start on September 26, between the pennant winners and a team composed of at least one and not more than three players from each of the losing teams. Twenty per cent. of the gate receipts will go for expenses, the remaining eighty per cent. to be divided among the players, fifty per cent. to the winners and thirty per cent. to the losers.

BOSTON PRINTERS PLAY ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 29.—Cincinnati Typos bested the Pittsburg team yesterday in the initial set of the 10-game tournament of the Union Printers' National Baseball League, the score being 12 to 5. Local printers clash with the Boston nine to-day.

30-DAY MEET.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 29.—Announcement was made to-day that a thirty-day meeting would be given at Moncrief Park, Jacksonville, this Winter, to precede the meeting at Havana.

ALL BASE HITS IN FAN CONTEST

New England fans are all rushing to get in line now for the AMERICAN'S free trips to the World's Series Contest.

The friends of those whose names appear in the list printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN are all out on the hill for their favorites, and votes are piling into the Contest Department.

The ten fans who receive the greatest number of votes before the contest closes on October 1, will be given trips to the games and will each receive a trip, all expenses paid, to see the entire set of World's Series Games, wherever they may be played.

The winners will travel from city to city as the guests of the AMERICAN, and no effort will be spared to make the trip a glorious one for all concerned.

Contestants are urged to send their photographs to the World's Series Editor, P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass. The Contest Editor will arrange to print as many of these photographs as possible from time to time, and therefore it is well for each fan who is at all interested in the battle for this high baseball honor, to hunt up a photograph of his earliest possessment, and send it to the Contest Editor.

Among the entrants in the contest to-day is Mel Inglis of Brockton. Mr. McGonagle is well known to all the fans of Brockton and vicinity. He is the son of the late William H. McGonagle, who played professional baseball for Trenty, before starting his career in Fall River. While in Buffalo he was manager of the team and also acted in the same capacity for the National League team in Brooklyn.

When Mr. McGonagle announced his intention of entering the contest, the baseball bugs in the Shoe City immediately started to work piling up votes for him. Fred can be found at all games in Brockton and the fans never have to refer to a record book when he is around, as he has the averages of all the big league stars tucked away in his head ready for use at any time. Among the big baseball men whom Fred counts as personal friends are Pat Powers, John I. Taylor, Tom McCarthy and Hugh Duffy.

Mr. McGonagle says he expects to be returned one of the winners of this great contest, but his friends all say he is a sure thing, and everybody in Brockton is working hard to send their favorite to the championship contests.

CALL OFF RACES AT READVILLE

By ED. COGSWELL.

Showers throughout the forenoon caused the postponement of the races scheduled for to-day at Readville race track. The program will be carried along one day, the futurity events of to-day and the 2:16 trot being on the card for Wednesday, and the Grand Circuit meeting closing Saturday in place of Friday.

In fact the Boston hotel corriders to-day the sole topic of conversation is the rich $12,000 American Horse Breeder futurity, the three-year-old division being the basis of discussion.

A wager of $1,000 to $700 was made by a couple of turfmen in one of the leading Washington street hotels, the long end of the bet naming Miss Stokes against the field.

A friend of the one taking the $700 part of the bet then offered to eliminate the wager, but the $1,000 was all the money would place at odds, though he offered to bet even up.

In the three-year-old division of the rich stake will compete the best class of youngsters that have turned up any track this season. With conditions perfect there would not be the slightest doubt that the record of the futurity would be smashed, Colorado E. has this honor, his time being 2:06½.

The remarkable fast time was recorded in 1910, and it was then remarked by expert horsemen that it would remain untouched for many seasons to come, but the past twelve months has seem come to the front three powerful trotting youngsters that with an even break seem to have it on the marvel of a year ago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Still fighting to keep their grip on third place, the Red Sox will battle again this afternoon with the white-legged men of the Comiskey's tribe for the rubber game of the series. Donavan's Boys come back at the locals yesterday after the notable defeat they suffered at the hands of Ed. Walsh on Sunday.

It may be some consolation to fans at home to reflect that as long as the Red Sox had to be defeated, the defeat came in a history-making contest such as Walsh's no-score twirling made.

The Boston battery had no trouble at all with the delivery of Baker and Natik yesterday. They toted off a total of eight runs and put up a nifty game in the field. To-day's game will be just as good as the Red Sox's performance of the season at Comiskey's Park.

Excessive Smoking

is not so much the number as the kind of cigars.

YOUR doctor says: "Only three cigars a day." He might as well say thirty-three if he doesn't specify the kind. Smoking three strong, black, juice-full, all-Havana cigars is hurtfully excessive for men who could smoke five or six with a WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigars daily without any excess at all. The reason for this:

Waitt & Bond BLACKSTONE

Cigars (10c) are made of the finest of light, aromatic Havana fully with a fleecy, neutral Sumatra wrapper, which relieves the heaviness of the clear Havana. You get the same flavor in the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar as in the pure Havana cigar, but without its heavy "headiness." Try them.

You actually do "cut down on your smoking" when you switch from overrich, black, clear Havanas to the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE.

SOMERVILLE SHY OF CHAMPIONSHIP TEAMS? WELL, JUST READ THIS

Now, here is a merry mixup. Three teams claiming the championship of Somerville.

Somerville B. B. C., champions of Somerville.

Bennett A. A., champions of Somerville.

Northwesterns, champions of Somerville.

Now, which team is the real champion? Last Tuesday the manager of the Somerville B. B. C. sent in a challenge to the AMERICAN in which he disputed the long-standing claim of the Bennett A. A. to the championship of Somerville.

The Bennetts came back a few days later challenging the Somerville B. B. C. to a series of games, and it looked as though it would be left between these two teams to fight it out for the title.

But now a new contestant has come to bat. The Northwesterns dispute the claim of both the Somerville B. B. C. and the Bennett A. A. teams, and from what the manager says, his team is the real goods. Read what he says:

Sporting editor, AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In the Saturday edition of the AMERICAN I noticed a challenge from the Bennett A. A. baseball team to the Somerville B. B. C. for the championship of Somerville. I would like to know by what right the Somerville B. B. C. has to claim any championship honors.

The Northwesterns played them twice and defeated them both times. We had a game arranged with the Bennetts, but they must have got "cold feet," as they called the game off at a late hour with a very silly excuse. Now the proper thing for the Bennetts to do is to get a reputation by defeating the Somerville B. B. C. and if they defeat the said team, to play the Northwesterns, as we claim the championship of the city, and we will back up our claim by playing the Bennetts or any other team who disputes our title to it.

We will play for the entire gate receipts, the same to be given by the winning team to the Working Boys' Home or the Somerville Hospital. Now here is a chance for the Bennetts which should be accepted by them.

Yours very truly,
WM. M. MORRISON, Mgr.,
Northwestern Baseball Team,
No. 97 Rogers avenue, W. Somerville.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MOGUL HAS FLOWN

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, made a flying trip to the Hub yesterday and paid a short visit to John I. Taylor, president of the Red Sox. Just what was the cause of this visit is a mystery. Ban and Taylor both refused to answer a question. Johnson did not stay long for he took the midnight to the big town.

RUSTLER GAME IS PUT OVER

The game scheduled for this afternoon between the Rustlers and Fred Clarke's Pirates was called off on account of rain at 10:30 this morning.

The teams will play a double-header to-morrow, the first game starting at 1:30. This double bill will wind up the season's engagement of the Pirates here and will also mark the last appearance of the Rustlers on their home grounds for a while.

A double-header with the Pirates, who are now contenders for the National League pennant, is something of an attraction in itself. To add to the attractiveness of the proposition Secretary Billy Locke of the Pittsburg Club has signed Marty Purtell, the high-priced pitcher, would probably work in one of the games. O'Toole, who has been promised a tryout, and the fans will not believe he is really going to pitch until they see him in the box. However, Secretary Locke is responsible for the statement that he will not send if his ducks feel cool.

Manager Fenney announced that Cy Young would be likely to pitch one of the games. So there's a chance that the folks who journey to the South End Grounds to-morrow will get a run for their money.

The Pirates have had a rocky road on their last invasion of the East and Clarke needs the entire series to give him a solid footing based on the lead in the general rag.

The absence of the big Dutchman at short is a serious blow to him. Not that Tommy Leach isn't a fair fielding first-class game at short field, but his slipshod throwing necessarily keeps him from grade. Tommy let a ball from Gowdy's bat roll between his legs yesterday and some of the scorers were kind enough to chalk it up as a hit and the error of a bad second. The play didn't make any trouble for the Pirates, but nevertheless, it's horseshoes to racing plates that Honus would have eaten it alive.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Jack Knilnon, recently released from the catching staff of the Boston Red Sox, has been signed by the Philadelphia Nationals and ordered to report for work to-day.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME FOR PARKER

BRISTOL, Ct., Aug. 29.—The first no-hit, no-run game of the Connecticut League this season was pitched yesterday by Parker of the New Britain team against Waterbury, the score being 1 to 0.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

The slow grounds yesterday helped to make a fast game. A lot of stiff stops on both sides. Which accounts for Taylor's spelled trouble, were cutely fielded and, contrary-wise, the runners going allowed two or three men to reach first without error on account of difficulty in fielding.

Three Pittsburg players enjoyed the distinction of being selected as leadoff men on hits which they tried to stretch into doubles. Moth obliged to run. Messrs. Jackson and Miller, for your trusty dogs.

Gowdy was there with the goods in an odd play in the sixth inning. With Leach on second and McKechnie safe on Sweeney's base throw, Leach attempted to go to third, but Gowdy recovered the ball and pegged him out to McDonald in the play.

Some of the scorers had an argument about Fred Clark's two-bagger in the opening inning. It went to the right field bleachers, and Doc Miller got his hands on it but dropped the ball. The verdict was in favor of Clark and the Doc escaped an error, considering that his back was against the fence.

CALLAHAN AND GALLANT DRAW

Tom Penny Callahan of Brockton and Gilbert Gallant of Clinton fought six fast rounds to a draw last evening at Lyceum Hall, Woburn. Callahan had the best of the argument and many thought he should have had the decision.

Callahan danced around in the second and third and did a great deal more leading for the chances but the men were to have trouded to get on the heads. Gallant looked better at least his punches landed.

In the preliminaries Young McIntosh of Woburn and Kid Murphy of Boston fought a draw, and Mickey Brown of Boston and Kid McFarland of Woburn fought a draw won the decision over Peter McHugh of Woburn.

The Starfish Giants, with "Eaglebeak" Spruder pitching and Whizzlewhiz playing well have been 97 million to nothing as it has often pitched a no-hit no-run game left field, got credit for winning yesterday's game as the result of a coppice of Young Marquard, the kid from the West, who pitched for the Wasps with his left hand just for practise and set the entire neighborhood on its ear by getting body's goat.

The score was 42 to 28. It might as well be 97 million to nothing, as it was a present, pure and simple.

When using his right hand, Young Marquard is the king of all and he pitches. We found out yesterday that he used to pitch for the Young Stars out West, the team that cleaned up the Telegraph Hill bunch about two years ago. He says he with his right hand, but that pretenders are all the rage now and he wants to be one.

To tell the truth, we are a little sorry that he picked out our league to practise in, as he cuts things on the blink.

He will not let Whizzlewhiz get a chance to hit the ball.

He always manages to hit "Eaglebeak" Spruder in the ear and give him a bean every time he gets up. He loafes upon batting left-handed and strikes out on purpose, just to kid "Eaglebeak," who is trying his hardest to show him up. In fact, he does nothing but get everybody boiling mad, and when he has them where he wants them he walks off and leaves them flat after telling them what he could do if he had tried.

He is ridiculing the whole league. That's what he is doing, and we do not like it any better than the league officials. Of course, that rough stuff makes a hit with the fans, but they never take things seriously.

Emily Morton may be able to make Socks jump through and roll over, but she will have a pretty hard time training Young Marquard. She tried to get him on the string yesterday, but he stepped on her neck in no time. He is the strangest kid we ever saw. More about him in tomorrow's paper.

Nature Studies---The Lamb

By DOROTHY DIX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

CONSIDER the Lamb, my daughter; learn of its ways and grow wise. Behold the fleecy whiteness of the Lamb, which stretch the snow, and which hath become the emblem of purity. So do thou keep thyself unspotted from the world and let not so much as a fleck of the mud of gossip hang to the hem of thy petticoats.

For, verily, man admireth woman for many things—for her wit, for her beauty, for being a good fellow; but the quality in woman that taketh the wedding cake, is purity, and the more of a black sheep a man is the more he demandeth that the lambkin he goeth with to the altar shall be without spot or blemish.

Hires a Taxi

Believe me, daughter, when I tell thee that she is a foolish virgin who knoweth not the habits of man who pretendeth to be a Tin-Horn Sport, for the ways of a man with a maid are deceitful and full of guile. For verily a man will coax thee to drink of the fizz water when it bubbleth in the glass, and of the cocktail when it whisketh at thee, and then he will lamblead thee in the market place for being a mouse.

Yea, he will tell thee the wrong story, and if thou laughest at the right place, he will confidently flee an ass who knoweth too much, and he will spend many moons proving to thee that there is no harm in a little, teeny, weeny kiss, and if thou permittest him to courtlove thee by his arguments, he will go forth and pop the question to some virgin who keepeth her lips in cold storage.

The shepherd carrieth the Lamb in his bosom because the Lambkin appeareth humbly on the ground, and as if it lacketh the strength to walk. Even so, my daughter, for the woman who weareth two-inch French heel slippers and little silk stockings, wilt some man hire a taxi to convey her to and fro, but to the maiden who weareth flat feets and Warm Hosiery he will say: "Come, let us walk, it is only sixty-nine blocks, and the exercise will do you good!"

Cultivate the helplessness of the Lamb, my child, if thou wouldst have a soft snap in life, for the woman who knoweth how to perform upon the gas range will have to get through her days in wrestling with the pot and the frying pan, but she who turneth the potato and scorcheth the meat and falleth at the sight of the kitchen, will spend her life in an apartment hotel where she hath nought to do but to push the button and her husband payeth the rest.

Value of Tears

Let this teach thee the value of tears, and when thou wanteth a thing be not as those foolish virgins who think to acquire a thing because it is their right. Verily such a one will make a man fight from the ceiling of the gym to the ceiling down thereof, but the woman who turneth on the water works hath him gutting in two minutes.

Observe the innocent gambols of the Lamb, my daughter, and how it frisketh about the green; yet, in all of its frolics, how gentle and dainty it is. Imitate the lamb in thy sports, my child, be gay and cheerful, yet never rude or boisterous. For, while man disporteth himself with a maiden who is a Cut-up and a Scream and spindleth her who bobbeth the jumping championship and the golf trophy, he inscribeth the wise virgin, who sitteth within the shadow of the club house under a pink parasol and keepeth the Powder on her nose and the Wave in her hair.

Finally, my daughter, observe that the Lambkin weareth its baby face coat and doeth its cute little tricks only whilst it is young. Let this teach thee to put away the simple muslin frock and the lingerie bonnet and the cuddlesome ways of sixteen when thy mirror telleth thee that thou lookest forty, and then some; for lo! there is nothing that striketh the Funny Bone of a man so hard, and causeth him to so shake with laughter as the spectacle of Old Sheep dressed as Spring Lamb.

Thus, from the simple animal, my daughter, mayst thou obtain many tips to guide thee aright in life.

The Vanity Box

A Mystery Story of Absorbing Interest

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By ALICE STUYVESANT

Copyright, 1910, 1911, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

A N observant person, a student of life and human character, would have noticed the two travelers with a particular interest, sharpened to curiosity. An unobservant person would merely have seen a young woman and a girl journeying together; the woman gracious and distinguished in appearance, with supreme charm of individuality; the girl brilliantly beautiful, with cheeks like roses and blue eyes like stars.

He would have seen that they were well but simply dressed, that they did not trouble to talk to each other much, though they seemed on friendly terms, and that both were rather tired of traveling, or impatient to reach England.

The observant person, however, would have seen far more. He would have seen that the woman's pallor and the girl's tears were caused by the same almost unbearable anxiety; that their quiet manner was retained only by desperate efforts at self-control.

He would have guessed that each wished to hide her excitement from the other, and that the girl, feeling herself little fitted for a tuboood subject, to which each one gave her whole thought. He would have guessed at a moving romance or tragedy which shaped the lives of both, and drew them toward a common goal.

By this time Ian Barr was in England, and Nora's great desire was to find out what had happened to him there. Her own conduct was to be determined by Sir Ian Hereward's. Her Ian would be silent to the end, whatever it might be, she was only too sure. But if Sir Ian Hereward kept silence, she would not. She would speak, even though the breaking of her promise meant the end of Ian's love.

"They shan't kill him—they shan't kill him!" the panting of the engine said for her, in rain and heat.

She could hardly wait to get to Dover because there they would see the evening papers. There might be news of some sort, good or bad, in them. She felt there would be news. Big, black headlines danced before her eyes: "Sir Ian Hereward Confesses to the murder of his wife." And, as a hideous alternative: "Evidence Piles Up Against Ian Barr. Damaging statements by Sir Ian Hereward."

What if, with the best will in the world to break her promise, to tell all the truth as she had told it to Sir Ian, his word should be believed against hers, with Ian Barr silent, refusing to corroborate her, refusing to defend himself as Sir Ian's expense.

The girl shivered as with agne when this thought crawled into her find, cold and sly as an adder. It might be so! It might be so! She wanted to kill Sir Ian. But that would not save her lover. Perhaps nothing could save him, after all.

Dominated by Fears

"Evening papers! Standard! Globe!" called a shrill little voice along the platform at Dover, where the long train was filling with passengers from the Channel boat.

Terry was dominated by her vague fears for Sir Ian, and she did not realise that the evening papers might be of unusual importance to her or Nora Verney. She was thinking what she would say in her letter to Sir Ian, which she intended to begin as soon as she was settled in her place in the train.

She had a stylographic pen and writing-case in her dressing-bag, and was anxious to put her thoughts on paper. She meant to say kind and cheering things to Sir Ian; and to save delay she would send the letter by messenger from somewhere near Victoria.

A porter put the ladies' small luggage into a first-class carriage, spreading it about, as clever porters will, in the hope of keeping out other passengers.

"Come, Nora," said Terry. "He's got our places. Would you like tea?"

But Nora did not move or answer, because she did not hear. She had bought a paper and was standing on the platform, in everybody's way, eagerly reading something on the middle page. Terry had to touch the girl on the arm to rouse her. Then she started and, crumpling the paper in her hand followed Miss Ricardo to the door of their compartment with a bewildered air.

"What is the matter?" Terry asked, when the porter was paid and dismissed.

"The paper," said Nora dazedly. "They've found Liane and arrested her—this morning."

"Oh!" cried Terry, with a quickening of her tired pulses. "Arrested her? Does that mean—will it save your Ian?"

"I don't know," answered Nora. "Perhaps I'm stupid. But I can't see that it will help him much. Please read, and tell me what you think."

Forgetting the letter which she had been so eager to begin, Terry took the paper from Nora's hand. It was open at the middle, most important page, and in the most conspicuous position appeared two columns under a sensationally large double heading:

"Another Startling Development in the Hereward Murder Mystery. Pawning of the Lost 'Vanity Box.' Arrest of Vashled French Maid. Her Extraordinary Confession."

The blood began to knock at Terry Ricardo's temples. She plunged into the news as Nora had, oblivious of everything else, as the girl had been. Nora watched her anxiously, as she read on.

Liane Rodache had been found by the "smart young detective, Gaylor," living in lodgings in Moreton Crescent, Westbourne Grove, and arrested on suspicion of complicity in the murder of Lady Hereward. She had confessed to pawning the gold vanity box which had led to her discovery, and it had been identified by Sir Ian Hereward on his return from France, as the property of his late wife.

To Be Continued To-morrow

"The Vanity Box" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN

NOTHING ELSE

"Well, you may say what you like about young ministers being inexperienced, but I have nothing but praise for our young pastor—nothing but praise."

"So I observed," remarked the man who passed the plate.

Breakfasts

By THE GENTLEWOMAN

EVERY now and again lazy people are scared almost out of their wits by the rumor that the early breakfast habit has been revived. It is now whispered in England that Mr. Lloyd George's seal is manifesting itself in the direction of social breakfasts, and that this revival of an ancient habit is likely at no distant date to be universally adopted.

This is good news. For many years breakfast has been under a ban. It has become fashionable for superficial thinkers to decry this meal, and to look with contempt on all who are able to digest a "good honest, wholesome hungry breakfast." Women took up the pose, and declared that they could eat nothing in the morning. In order that none might be able to disprove the truth of this assertion, they adopted the habit of breakfasting in bed.

Others went still further, and advocated the "no breakfast" plan, as being a cure for all the physical and mental ailments under the sun.

It is just in the nick of time, therefore, that the English statesman has come forward to save us from what would be little short of a national calamity. The disappearance of breakfast would mean the disappearance of backbone.

If breakfast is a disagreeable meal (as some folks aver), then all the more reason why we should get up and face it. We are becoming altogether too soft and effeminate, shrinking from everything that is not entirely agreeable to us. Charles Lamb was largely responsible for bringing the morning meal into disrepute.

Breakfast is, above all things, a respectable meal. One cannot imagine a man or woman, who is always down punctually to breakfast, being other than a highly respectable member of society. A dinner may be frivolous, a supper may be hilarious, but a breakfast is always staid and solemn and conducive to the building up of a sound and sensible character.

Women have tried to excuse their absence from the breakfast table on the plea that they never look their best in the early morning hours. But beauty is superfluous at breakfast, save when it manifests itself in the cunning red and white of bacon, in the delicate aroma of coffee, or the translucent amber of marmalade or honey. Our aesthetic sensibilities are not fully awake till the afternoon.

There are some who complain that their conversational powers are unsatisfactory at breakfast time. This is because they attempt too much. They try to be witty. Bon mots are not suitable for breakfast. Light and airy persiflage should be reserved for a later hour in the day. Theology, philosophy, metaphysics, and occasionally politics, provide suitable material for breakfast-table conversation, and if people adhered strictly to these subjects they would find little cause to complain of conversational difficulties at the first meal of the day.

What He Knew

"ARE you married or single, sir?" asked Sailquik, the tailor, as he measured his customer.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the new suit seeker. "Married, of course! But what on earth do you want to know that for?"

"Then let me recommend this, sir," said Sailquik briskly. "My own device, sir—a patent safety deposit pocket for married men. It contains a most ingenious little contrivance that feels exactly like a live mouse. Yes, I thought you'd like it, sir!"

Brave Rosamond pluckily rows her hero, Claude, after the villain, who with his pals is trying to swim away. Claude blazes away with a rifle, but, as any one who has followed his adventures must have noticed, he is perhaps the worst shot in the world. We attribute this to his anxiety for the safety of his beautiful sweetheart. In shooting, as in everything else, success comes only from mental concentration.

swimming with long, powerful strokes the Great White Villain and his black pals get around a bend and seem about to escape from Claude when a huge hippopotamus suddenly looms up before them. Nothing like the enormous jaws of the hippo could swallow a strawberry shortcake at one gulp. The hippo is not regarded as a ferocious animal, but frankly we shouldn't like to be in Desmond's place.

[illegible] thing, however—he is very resourceful. By an astonishing ballooning act he forms a pyramid in the water, one of his black assistant villains swimming and supporting the other two. Desmond, of course, is at the top, as that is the safest place, and also the one requiring the least work. An astute scoundrel, indeed, and one that overlooks few bets in the gamble we call life.

[illegible] hopped upon the hippo's head, where he is almost concealed behind the huge upper jaw. The black men swim away with the hippo in pursuit. The amphibian acts as a living motor boat for the villain, who chuckles at his cleverness. Meanwhile, when not entertaining with the whale, had only a stolen, inside stateroom, Desmond has a choice deck room.

[illegible] gentle creature, like all true heroes, has a tender heart. While he knows that the world must be rid of Desmond, he believes that the untutored black men may be saved to society, and endeavors to row straight for the hippopotamus, intending to arrest his progress by the submerged Wild Men. It speaks well for Claude's tenderness, and for the judgment that must be used in dealing with such an outlaw as Desmond.

[illegible] "I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and I've got the goods!" He covers Claude with his revolver and commands him to row while he jumps into the boat and captures Rosamond. The true black men cling to the side of the boat and too late he wakes up to the fact that he has been outwitted. Even now, Rosamond does not lose faith in her hero. He may be foiled, but he is still heroic. Tomorrow we shall know more.

What the Doctor Said

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

"IT is not only impossible," said the doctor, "to tell what other people are thinking about, but it is often impossible to tell what they are doing.

"A patient of mine, who rides to and from town every day, in a street car, is practicing a cure and nobody knows it. He came to me two months ago asking for a remedy to reduce his weight. I examined him and recommended that he take no medicine whatever; nor change his diet. But I did suggest some corrective habits.

"The man looked fat and shapeless when he came to me. His heart was all right, but he knew as little about breathing as a mummy. I stood him up here before the mirror and asked him to let his arms hang loosely, throw out the chest, and to note that when the chest is forward, the stomach is where it belongs. When he looked at himself, he exclaimed: 'Why, I don't look so fat now!'

"He had relaxed so much that he had lost all his shape.

"My directions to him were simple. Anybody can benefit from the practice of them, as they take no special time. Here they are:

"Sit up straight.

"Don't breathe at the top of the lungs, but all over the lung surface.

"Don't gasp, but breathe rhythmically—this is important—and always through the nostrils.

"When you walk, keep the position you took before the mirror, inhale deeply for five steps, hold the breath for five more steps, and exhale five.

"Do this daily and regularly, and hit by his increase the number of steps.

"When you go to bed, lie for a few minutes on the back and compose the body through regular breathing. When you feel drowsy take the position most comfortable to you and go to sleep.

"These are simple rules," said the Doctor, "but any man or woman who practices them faithfully will correct the obesity, all-fallen-in appearance most people have, the lungs will be employed fully, as they should be, and chest and stomach will tone up at once.

"Furthermore," he continued, "the practice of these rules is the greatest train ing for the Will that a man can undertake—what, otherwise, are idle moments, are being directed to definite activity. A man can sit in a trolley car, keep his chest up, regulate his breathing, read his paper, and no one will ever suspect what he is doing.

"If there were nothing else in it than the exercise of the Will it would be a godsend to most people.

II.

"The newspapers are doing a great work through the articles on hygiene they publish from time to time. I read a day or two ago that a London paper asked Mrs. Bingham for her secret of eternal youth. It is reported that she looks younger than her own daughter. Her reply was, 'My secret is plenty of good soap and water.' They are a wonderful help in this life. But undoubtedly the lady breathes as I advised my patient to breathe, and gets enough sleep."

The Rocky Hill

By KENNETT HARRIS

OH, Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch with them a pail to fill
With water from the bubbling rill that from the top was flowing.
The way was steep and hard and rough, the little feet were far from tough,
But Jack was stout and bold enough and set his heart on going.

You may remember how they fared, that little couple sweetly paired;
What he would do she gladly dared. No tale is this for laughter,
For Jack, the heedless, tumbled down and cracked his little curly crown,
And Jill she tripped upon her gown and went a-tumbling after.

I do not think they ever tell that Jill was grieved because they fell
And kissed the place to make it well and hurried off for plaster;
But never doubt the little maid no end of sympathy displayed
And did her very best to aid the victim of disaster.

I have a rocky hill to climb and I may reach the top in time.
My little Jill has faith sublime, and she has not denied me:
So what care I for broken crowns or fortune's smiles or fortune's frowns
If I can have my ups and downs with little Jill beside me?

The Manicure Lady glared at the Head Barber for at least as long as it would take a good watch to tick sixty times, and then remarked frigidly:

Not Him

"GOOD morning, Mrs. Simpkins!" said a suburban lady who is very short-sighted. "Your husband must be very fond of gardening. I see him out there early every morning down at the bottom of the garden. And how well he looks, to be sure!"

Mrs. Simpkins stamped the door in her neighbor's face. The latter went to tell her daughter.

"And you said, mother, that the—the thing in the onion-bed was her husband?"

"I did."

"Ah, well, that explains the matter. What you took for Mr. Simpkins is a weed."

Trouble

SHE was a good scholar.

Mrs. Wanderlaw never wished for better. But in the manner of pictures Jamie was weak. There was this in particular which showed the Leaning Tower of Pisa. Every day Mrs. W. hung it straight, and every morning Jennie got it crooked.

So Mrs. watched.

"Now, look here, Jennie," she said, "you hang that picture of the tower crooked again. Just look at it."

That's just what I say, mum," returned the domestic dolefully. "Look at it. The only way you can get that nice square to hang straight is to hang the picture crooked."

Nipped

DEAREST Clara," wrote the young man, "I am awfully sorry, but I am getting so forgetful nowadays. I proposed to you last night, but I really forget whether you said Yes or No."

And the answer came by return:

"Dear Jack," she wrote, "so glad to hear from you! I know I said 'No' to some one last night, but I really couldn't remember just who it was. Thanks

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

BUT interpolated between each call for "Purser Lowsmith" was an equally impatient and anxious Morse prayer for "Cruiser Princeton—Cruiser Princeton—"

"That's almost enough to wake the dead," he mentally assured himself as he adjusted his "set," switched off, and pressed the phones close in to his ears.

Through these phones, as he listened, came a sound as feeble and minute as the tick of that insect known as a death-watch. His first thought was that it could be nothing more than a mere "echo-signal," from too high intensity.

His second thought convinced him that this was out of the question; too long a time had elapsed between his own send and those coherent dots and dashes creeping into his startled ear.

It was an outside message, a call being intercepted by his antennæ. Yet the signal that he was reading was the same as his own "Pr-Ns," "Pr-Ns."

"Are You With Us?"

McKinnon's hand once more darted out to his switch, and his face was alert and changing with the changing thought as he caught up his key-lever. And again the blue spark exploded across the spark-gap, and the cabin walls threw back the lightning-like flash and pulse of the illumination.

Already he had forgotten the heat, the depressing sense of frustration, the brooding consciousness of impending defeat that had weighed upon him. Switching off, he sat with inclined head, intently, rapidly listening.

He was startled to feel a lure and spike like hand suddenly take hold of his arm.

"What're you getting?" demanded the owner of the arm.

It was Ganley standing there close beside him. His dark face, wet with perspiration, shone in the strong side-light as though it had been oiled. His peering eyes showed in two thin crescents of white, out of the heavy shadow made by the projecting eye bones.

"Nothing," was McKinnon's sharp retort. "I'm only trying to get something."

He shook the detaining hand from his arm, and gave all his attention to the call. But the intruder was not to be so easily overridden.

"Are you with us?" he demanded pregnantly, as the preoccupied operator again caught up the phone-set.

"Yes—yes, I'm with you," cried the mate, stooping over the responder. "But I'm trying to operate!"

"What in hell does this operating count if you're with us?" persisted the placid-toned Ganley, determined, apparently, on a policy of obstruction.

"It's this call that's going to save both our scalps," was the abstracted yet hurried retort.

"How save my scalp?" demanded Ganley, with a detaining hand on the other's fore-arm.

The stooping McKinnon straightened up and wheeled on him, every nerve ready to snap like an overstrained bowstring.

"I've got to catch this call! Don't talk—keep away from me!"

Ordered Out

Ganley looked at him heavily. He did not speak. But a third voice thundered abruptly, and unexpectedly through the low cabin. It was Captain Yandell's, belligerent, attentorian, bull-like.

"Come out o' that station!"

The man addressed did not move.

"Come out o' there and stop interfering with my men!"

Ganley turned his head slowly about and gazed at the ship's master. But otherwise he showed no sign of having heard.

"Are you comin' out o' there?" demanded that apoplectic-faced officer, in a roar of indolence and affronted authority. There was no reading his blind and unreasoning anger. Ganley shrugged a massive shoulder.

"Since you ask me so politely, I s'pose so," he proceeded, with his sardonic laugh. Then he placidly turned about and stepped to the doorway, and from the doorway to the open deck.

"Now you get below-decks where you belong!"

The gaze of the two men met and locked; it was like the clash and lock of elk-antlers.

In that interlocked gaze lay animal-like challenge and counter-challenge, threat and counter-threat, belligerent fortitude and no even more belligerent defiance.

Ganley, with a flip curl of contempt, thrust his hands slowly down in his pockets and then turned on his heel and went below.

"What're you getting?" Captain Yandell demanded of the man cloistered with the shining band of steel coiling to two small black knobs.

"They don't answer!" cried McKinnon, with a gasp of exasperation.

"Don't answer?" demanded the captain.

"No, I've lost them!" was the bitter cry of the man bent over his cabeer.

The ship's master's blasphemy was both prolonged and volubile.

"And you ain't goin' to get 'em!"

"I've lost them," was the repeated and almost hopeless answer. The incensed-eyed officer peered at the operator's drawn and sweat-stained face.

"You're makin' a devil of a dire mess o' this business, between you!" he declared, with another oath of disgust.

The wireless operator only stared at his instruments, silently, challengingly, combatively.

Startled from Sleep

It was two hours later when a great, wide-shouldered figure in white duck passed quietly along the empty bridge-deck. This ghostlike figure cautiously tried the door of the wireless room, but found it securely locked.

Then it crept about to the half-open shutter and stood there, minute after minute, in an attitude of listening. Beyond the luminous dome of the electric fan there was nothing to be heard from within. And the room itself was in utter darkness.

The man at the window waited for still another space of time, peering back and forth along the deck to make sure that his movements were unobserved. Then he raised a cautious arm and slid the barred shutter farther along its groove.

New Drug That Quickly Removes These Homely Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as a new drug, othine—double strength, has been discovered that is a positive cure for these homely spots.

Simply get one ounce of othine—double strength, from Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst have begun to disappear, while the light freckles have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength othine, as this is sold under the guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

'GINGER GIRLS' HERE WITH LATEST VAUDEVILLE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

If there are any among the vast army of playgoers who still hold to the lingering belief that burlesque is the same rough and tumble entertainment that caught our fancy a few years ago, let them—or them—look seriously upon "The Ginger Girls," who are cavorting merrily at the Gaiety Theatre this week.

If you are looking for the kind of amusement that feeds your eyes upon grotesque female figures of the dreadnought type and consists that depends solely upon broad for applause, "The Ginger Girls" will doubtless prove a distinct disappointment; but if you find enjoyment in watching scantily young women do sensible things with their clothes and toes, if you have a respectable sense of humor and if your choice runs to finer lineland of corner things in entertainment, you will discover that "The Ginger Girls" supply musical drama of better quality than has been bestowed up to the present day of burlesque.

There is a general tendency of the drama is not confined to the particular section of the country where you find a band for an evening's diversion is amply shown at the Gaiety, where you will find everything contained in any of the better vaudeville houses except the familiar names of high salaried stars.

Old Days in the Shade.

It is all right to excite yourself over the imaginary glories of the past—in fact, it is the proper thing in criticism—but the old days is further than and nothing on the new, and no great effort is demanded from the audience.

All of the old and familiar tricks of burlesque entertainment were absent at yesterday's performance of "The Ginger Girls," which means that the comedians did not resort to the time-worn "wheeze" chain in the cast put legitimate effort into their work, and the chorus ladies in the sun best bet in a burlesque organization—did other things than parade in loose costumes. Naturally there were young women in the chorus without whom the fair vestige of burlesque would have departed long ago, but the majority and every night in the week to wear them, someone had done a little picking.

There were moments when you would have been to believe that "The Ginger Girls" was a company undertaking for Ed. Lee Wrothe and Junie McCree, who have been for a great many years the best of certain chiefly happenings at Independent Hall. For the only kind of the tense situations came with the arrival of gorgeously gowned women, who were dusted about with much gaiety while the chorus were trying to get themselves in whose forms depended upon the winning of the fourth or fifth place in the line. It was a long, and slazy, but it terminated happily, which pleased everybody.

Matter of plain fact everything seemed to please the audience—everything from the villainies of Ed. Lee Wrothe and Junie McCree, who are unquestionably the foremost exponents of the soubrette. It was an evening of unalloyed joy.

A Comedian Who Is Funny.

Not a little of the joy of the performance was a direct result of the labors of Ed. Wrothe, who is a comedian who is not only humorous as a frisky jaultor. Mr. Wrothe was a comedian with an eye for humor that is more than usually keen, for more than can be said of many actors who have had the opportunity of observing good jantors, the good actors are scarce, but Mr. Wrothe is the equal of the best particular.

Junie Mc Wrothe did not add much to the beauty of the performance, nothing exceptional that could be expected of him. Miss Bertie Evans and Miss La Beau took care of that section of the audience quite well. Miss Evans possesses a self exceedingly well and proved a positive joy to the eye. Miss La Beau demonstrated that it was "great to be a hockey boy." Miss Evans also demonstrated that life as a jockey the racing business will pick up.

Another faithful burlesque friend was present at the performance yesterday in the olio—and nobody suffered through the intrusion. With some new faces and with substantial entertainment, there was no reason why the Gaiety should expect to lose its patronage.

"The Ginger Girls" offer ample proof that burlesque is not dead, but that it is fifty per cent better than ever, and closer at the heels of high priced musical comedy.

Majestic Theatre.

Three Weeks," the four-act drama, founded upon Elinor Glyn's sensational novel of the same title, had its premiere with enthusiasm at the Majestic Theatre. Large crowds are flocking out at every performance.

The piece is excellently handled by Lindsay Morison's stock company and the tremendous applause which greets the efforts of the players is ample evidence of the appreciation of the audience. The story of "Three Weeks" was retold in detail ten. Much was left for the imagination, and it was thought it would be impossible to make a play out of the book, owing to the number of the characters, but in this the entire first act is given over to explanations and the introduction of the characters, which makes the remainder of the performance more matter of fact.

Morison, as the queen, is all that the part could demand and Wilson Mendelssohn delights the audience by his interpretation of Paul Verdayne, which is a strong one. Miss Rhea, the drunken king, leaves a splendid impression of his abilities and after the play is talked about in the best set. H. G. Carleton and will Hamilton Wells, the other Englishmen, in their parts true to life. Mrs. George A. Hibbard's popularity increases at every performance and the minor parts in the piece are given care of with their usual standard of excellence.

Keith's.

"Just Like a Woman," a sketch, telling the old story of a husband neglecting the morning after" and trying to square himself with his wife, is one of the features of an unusually strong bill at Keith's this week with Charles J. Ross playing the role of the gay New York man who has appointed to meet the wife. Audience at the opening performance were kept in laughter by the characteristic "explanations," in which Harry H. Richards, Jane Bridge and Minnie Dupree take part. Miss Dupree is the Timmy Tomsy take part. Miss Dupree is the Timmy Tomsy take part. The bill is opened by Perry and Pelot in a juggling novelty and the audience merry. The ventriloquist, Frank Bevan, with several manikins, and Ben Deely and Co. in a sketch entitled "Two Soldiers" follow. Colonel Holdsworth, the author of "Just Like a Woman" is present at every performance and is always cheered.

STERN SUFFRAGISTS WILL MARCH TO-NIGHT

It is up to the horrid weather man whether the Suffragists parade preliminary to a mass meeting at Faneuil Hall this evening. Being a man the more advanced Suffragists feel no personal fear or dampen on the proceedings, but as there's no weather wisdom in the apartment parcell yet, the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association must be patient and postpone the meeting if the weather is on unfavorable.

The mass meeting is to enlist aid by the Votes for Women League that the Fall forces of Suffragists are making. The speakers will be Mrs. Cecelia Fleming of New York Representative Rose Winslow, Miss Martha Gruening, Mrs. Charles Park, Miss Alice Carpenter and Susan Walker Fitzgerald.

JESUIT PRIEST DYING AT CARNEY HOSPITAL

At the Carney Hospital to-day it was said that the Rev. Mariano Balcell, S. J., is dying. He is suffering from cancer of the tongue. He was born in Tarragona, Spain, and served in the Spanish army. He came to Boston from the Jesuit headquarters of Spain. He lives on the Hudson, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., two years ago to study mechanical engineering at the Institute of Technology.

No Big Pig Ever Exploded Into Little Pigs. But—

Nevertheless We Print a Communication from Astronomer Thomas

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

We have received and hasten to publish a communication which explains how we happen to have a moon, where she came from, and how she warmed our earth and rescued it from a state of cold storage.

Here is the communication, which kindly read and inwardly digest:

Editor AMERICAN:

A new and startling scientific story is given to the world to-day by H. F. Thomas, explaining problems which have vexed scientists for centuries.

Whence came our satellite, the moon?

What caused the glacial period or ice age?

Why is not the earth's orbit outside that of Mars, where it ought to be, according to the laws of gravity and our superior mass?

Limited, as we are, in our knowledge of the true conditions of and surrounding the other planets, except Mars, we are denied a true parallel by which to consider this latter question.

Science admits the probability that the minor planets or asteroids are fragments of a superior planet which once occupied an orbit between those of Mars and Jupiter, and which was broken into comparatively small parts by some unknown cause, but we have no record of these three problems having been considered as closely related.

The new theory explains that up to the days of the Pleistocene period our earth had been gradually cooling from its early molten state until, during the ice age, the frigid zones extended over a comparatively great expanse, while gigantic glaciers and icebergs were producing problems for the future geologist.

At that time the earth had no satellite, and her orbit was between those of Mars and the asteroid planet. It seems useless to guess what caused the asteroid planet to explode, but explode she did, and with sufficient force to throw her largest fragment (or several fragments) to such a distance that the combined gravity of the parts was overcome by the superior attraction of the sun and earth, and the earth had secured her moon.

Had the sun and earth been in a direct line the onrushing satellite would have struck the earth, become a part of it, and the increased weight would have thrown our orbit farther from the sun. Fortunate it is for us that those bodies were not quite in line.

Fused into a great fiery mass by the forces that had sent her, the moon approached the earth as a flaming comet, was brought to a turn by the combined forces of gravity, and went whirling back into space as comets now turn about the sun.

With this great hot satellite swinging about the earth in a gradually reducing elliptical orbit, it is not surprising that the earth was again enveloped in a varying tropical heat.

But this new satellite did more than that for us; the incumbrance impeded our speed, and the consequential reduction of orbit brought us nearer the sun, thus insuring warmth for us long after the moon had cooled and died.

The Thomas theory also suggests further consideration of effects which the moon's motions may have upon the earth's general climate.

In the process of impeding our speed about the sun the moon becomes a power at the end of an immense lever; hence a ton of matter added to the moon would vastly overbalance the same weight added to the earth's mass. Viewed in this light, the ever-varying showers of meteoric matter falling upon the moon's surface may be a potent factor in determining some earthly climatic condition for knowledge of which the meteorologist is striving. Of course, this latter theory demands that the sun is gradually cooling.

Professor Bradley, an astronomer of no small merit, concurs in this new theory, and it is believed that the scientific world will adopt it in the absence of a better one.

H. F. THOMAS,
Astronomer, Geologist, Meteorologist, Stonington, Conn.

We offer this statement from Mr. Thomas, the astronomer, geologist and meteorologist, whom we do not know, for our readers' consideration.

Our own humble, ignorant notion is that very little has been left to chance or to explosions, in the creation of the universe.

Mr. Thomas sees our great sun travelling through the cosmic fields of ether with a lot of little child-planets around it. And he bases the existence of one or more of these little child-planets on the hypothesis that a bigger planet exploded.

Perhaps if a little ant in the grass saw a large mother pig walking across a clover field with little pigs of various sizes around her, that ant might explain the phenomenon by assuming that some time in the past a large pig had exploded and made all the little pigs.

But the ant would be wrong in his hypothesis. Pigs are born, NOT exploded. We are inclined to think that astronomers, geologists and meteorologists are wrong when they assume that the little moons and planets that follow our big sun are due to explosions or any other accident.

The normal birth of a planet might seem to our finite minds an explosion, an event to be explained in no other way, just as the birth of a pig might seem an accidental cataclysm to the ant in the grass.

Our humble opinion is that everything in this universe proceeds according to law, from the development of some great sun in the centre of a nebula, floating in space, to the emerging of a small pollywog from a nebula of frogs' eggs floating on a pool.

The Usual Dog Story

How Long Are Dangerous, Unplean Pests to Be Allowed at Large in Crowded Cities?

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Each day every city and town has its dog story. Some child mangled, some woman attacked.

To-day's story is told in the headings of newspapers published in New York City. You could find very much the same sort of a story in any city, no doubt.

THREE DOGS SHOT AFTER BITING MANY

Policeman Mattola Found Unconscious After Killing One in Fight in Dark.

BOY AND A GIRL NIPPED

Dog That Attacked Them Was Shot Down in Central Park—Crowd Follows Another Beast in Wild Run

No dog should be allowed at large in any city. Everything should be done with high taxation to discourage the keeping of dogs in the city. And in the country the dogs that bark and howl all night should be suppressed by intelligent co-operation.

The time for keeping dangerous pets has gone by—in crowded cities at least.

Stray dogs and cats should be destroyed—death is kindness to the animals.

I'LL TAKE A NAP AND IF I GET A BITE I WILL WAKE UP. OH! I FELL ONE
HUH! WHAT KIND OF A FISH IS THIS?
OH! I'VE FISHED A MERMAID! A REAL MERMAID
OH! MY HAIR IS CAUGHT IN SOME THING!
OH! WHO AND WHAT ARE YOU? LET ME GO!
NO! YOU BELONG TO ME!
I WONT HARM YOU I'LL TAKE YOU HOME
HELP! HELP! HE IS STEALING ME!
WHO ARE YOU, EH? HUH!
LET GO OF HER!
NEPTUNE OH! NEP TUNE! OH HELP ME!
WHO IS CALLING NEPTUNE
OH! YOU ROBBER!
YOU DON'T OWN THIS OCEAN!
I'LL SHOW YOU WHO OWNS THIS OCEAN!

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

HAPPINESS, AND HOW IT IS ACQUIRED

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THIS article is addressed to those whose one particular ambition in life is to be happy. This will include most of the readers of the AMERICAN, who are very much in this respect like the readers of all other newspapers.

Even a good deal of what we call our unselfishness is done with a view to the enjoyment we expect to get out of it. We are, none of us, as mean as we might be, but considerably more so than we ordinarily discredit ourselves with being. We have, at one time or another, reflected that the amount of our happiness is not proportioned to the amount of effort we make to secure it; but it may not have occurred to us that we never succeed in being happy by trying for it.

Most marks we hit by aiming directly at them; but not this one. Happiness, when it comes, comes as a sort of by-product; it is like those secondary results in manufactures, which have a marketable value, but were not comprised in the original intention of the manufacturer.

It is best won when not too strenuously wooed. There are certain stars which lie just on the edge of vision which one cannot see if one looks directly at them, but which become visible if looked at out of the CORNER of the eye.

How Happiness Comes as a By-Product to Industry

Happiness is much after the same order and is caught when we are not directly trying to catch it. If we are in fair physical and mental condition, it is our nature to be busy—busy about something—and if the work we are engaged in is a congenial one, and not overtaxing, the sense of feeling our powers exercised upon it is a satisfying and enjoyable one.

Power loves to work itself off. If our industry is of an intellectual kind, we enjoy feeling the movement of the mental machinery. That is really what fascinates us when we listen to a thrilling address—not the eloquence of the speaker, but a sense of the revolution of the wheels in our own brain.

Our happiness comes in that way. We strive for an object and happiness comes in as a by-product of effort. Other things being equal, the busiest people are, therefore, the happiest ones. To a man normally constituted, having nothing to do is an uncomfortable and disappointing luxury. The better his condition, the less susceptible he will be to the attractions of a heaven whose employments consists in listening only to the music of purling streams and fingering golden harps.

The dull colors in which heaven is customarily portrayed are what has given it so bad a repute. It is the misery of our civilization that so many millions of people are compelled to an amount of effort so excessive that the exercise and the expenditure of their energies are unattended by that sense of free and spontaneous effort that can alone bring satisfaction and pleasure.

Work begins to become slave work as soon as there ceases to be any playimpulse in it and any of the gladness that true play is always certain to draw after it.

There are two classes of slaves—those that are made such by the whip of the taskmaster and those who become such by the scourge of unjust circumstance.

Shattering of the High Protective Tariff Delusion

A HIGH protective tariff is, practically speaking, the one exclusive article in the creed of the Republican party, and to subvert that article would be to put the party out of commission.

The adoption of a doctrine of reciprocity IN NON-COMPETING articles is a break in its line of fortification; it is an inforced yielding to the demands of anti-protective policy, and the airs consistence with which the President's advocacy of it has been resisted by his own adherents indicates how clearly the movement is felt to be thus for the abandonment of hereditary Republicanism.

Mr. Taft's act has even been declared to be "the leading of the great Republican army into the quagmire of apostasy."

Undoubtedly it is a break in the dyke, and no one can prognosticate of how sweeping an inundation the slight perforation may be the forerunner.

It is all the more significant that the hearts of the people seem to have been with the President in his enthusiastic advocacy of a loosening of the extreme protective policy. Landslides are scarcely perceptible in their initial movement, but do a great deal of work before they have run their course.

The people will eventually settle matters one way or the other, and the popular judgment will eventuate in what is best for the country. Political domination, traditionalism and special interests will sooner or later be run over and trodden down by the claims of public advantage.

The Republican party has well served the country by its persistent effort to foster our infant industries, but industries that are from fifty to a hundred and fifty years old can hardly be called infantile.

What is good for the child may not be essential to the life and growth of the man.

Whatever confidence discriminating parents may have in a milk diet for their young offspring they do not consider that they are therefore under obligations to pursue a lacteal policy up to the date of the child's old age or even of his majority.

Doggone Sense

By MORTON BIRGE

THE pride of all the city room, from cub reporters up,
Was Ajax, one Intelligent, belligerent bull-pup.
"Pete" Googan's was his master's voice, and Peter always said
That never more sagacity was in one canine head.

One day some fresh compositors took Ajax out to dine.
They filled him up with lager beer, some Bourbon and some wine,
Which Ajax ignorantly drank till that respected pup
Was very much "intoxicate," if not to say "lit up."

Next morning Ajax was himself. The "Comps" set out again
To get him soused, but they forgot some dogs know more than men.
When Ajax sniffed "the stuff" he growled and backed out through the door,
With all the aspect of a dog who was extremely sore.

When Peter Googan heard the tale he patted Ajax' head,
And Ajax wagged his tail and barked as though he would have said:
"I've been there once and that's enough. It's nix again for me!"
Thus showing he had much more sense than many men we see.

Light Versus Gravitation

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ALMOST fascinating glimpse into the mysteries of the universe is furnished by the recent studies of Director Campbell, of the Lick Observatory, of the motions of stars in the line of sight. It has long been known that some stars are approaching the sun, while others are receding from it. The motions are not directly toward or away from us, but are directed at various angles to our line of sight. But the astonishing thing now beginning to be revealed is that the speed of these motions appears to depend upon the age of the stars. The older stars travel faster than the younger. The relative age is determined by the spectroscope. The sun appears to be a middle-aged star. The velocity of its motion is such as to carry it through space in a northerly direction about a million miles per day.

The discovery, for there appears to be little doubt of its substantial correctness, that the speed of the stars is proportioned to their age touches, in a manner which may not at first glance be obvious, upon the question of the constitution of the universe in which we live. Let us see how this is.

If the motion of the stars varies, not only with their mass and their nearness to some attracting centre, but also with their age, the only explanation that offers itself is that there must be something in the condition of the younger stars which renders them less subject to gravitational effects than the older ones are. They must be in such a state that the pull of gravitation upon them is less effective. This can be accounted for by the supposition that they have been subject to this pull for a shorter time, depending upon the period which has elapsed since they began to condense. Before condensation, while they are still in a purely nebulous state, it would seem that gravitation was unable to set them in motion.

Now this is explicable by the hypothesis that nebulous matter is so finely divided that the radiation pressure upon it is equal, as it must be opposite, to the gravitational pull. Many readers will recall that it has recently been shown that the radiation from the sun is capable of driving off, or pushing away, minute particles of matter in space say the hundred thousandth of an inch in diameter, in spite of the fact that its the sun's attraction is all the time drawing upon such particles. This phenomenon is called the "pressure of light," and it has been invoked to explain the fact that comets' tails always point away from the sun.

If, then, we suppose that a nebula in a scattered state is prevented from moving under the gravitational pull of the stars around it because their radiation pressure counteracts their attraction, we have an explanation of the fact that the great amorphous nebula in Orion appears to be standing still in space, although the stars about it are in swift motion. And we can likewise explain the fact that the younger stars move less rapidly than the older ones because they have, relatively speaking, only recently been condensed, to such an extent that the gravitational pull upon them exceeds the effects of the pressure of radiation. As time goes on their speed should increase, just as a stone falls faster the greater the height from which it has been dropped, and the longer it has been in motion.

The moral of all this is that we must now begin to take into account something else besides Newton's law of gravitation in studying the origin condition and the future history of the universe. Light pressure looms up as one of the master forces at work in the cosmos.
